FORD SAYS N.E. MEN MADE GOOD

Boston American Correspondent at Front Tells How They Stood Battle Test

By BERT FORD.

With the American Army in France—(By Mail).—The fellows from home have made good. The fellows from Boston and Massachusetts and other parts of New England have lived up to traditions. Don't call them "boys." They don't like it, and the War Department frowns upon the term. It isn't any more popular than that gingerbread title "Sammies."

"I was dead sure they would qualify with the best in our splendid army, and they did. I saw the high credit marks they scored during the tour on the Mexican border and I compared their sturdy physiques with other units along the western front—British, French and American.

"They met the test at Apremont Woods and Seichsprey and in the earlier patrol encounters and skirmishes along Chemen des Dames. And then came the major test of all at Chateau Thierry.

URGES TUCK BE NAMED SENATOR

Winfield Tuck of Winchester has written a letter to Governor Keyes of New Hampshire urging him to name Edward Tuck as United States Senator from New Hampshire. Edward Tuck, he points out, has a great interest in the State, as evidenced by his gift to Dartmouth College of the Tuck School of Administration and Finance and the historical building to Concord, N. H.

IDENTIFY TRAIN VICTIM BY BANK BOOK

A liberty bond and a bank book in the pockets of Edwin Mulse, a Gloucester fisherman, served to identify his body when he was instantly killed while crossing the Boston & Maine tracks at East Lynn. He had bought a ticket to Gloucester and was crossing the tracks to board the train when he was struck.

"Old Bill" Pickett Goes Down Town First Time in Sixty-Five Years

By KATHERIN E. BROOKS.

"Old Bill" Pickett, seventy-three, came down town today for the first time in sixty-five years.

For the first time he beheld Boston Common and the State House, having lived within two miles of both for all those sixty-five years.

When the Old State House was pointed out to him, and he looked for the first time on the historic landmark, he reverently pulled off his hat. And doffing his hat is not as easy and jaunty a process for the aged sexton of old St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church on Northampton street as it is for the younger generation.

His hand, stiffened by rheumatism and jolted by the unaccustomed motion of an automobile—for Bill did the town in style—went a little haltingly to his hat brim, but with fine spirit and determination to do reverence to the honorable past. And I fancied that the lion and the unicorn at the top of the old building returned a silent salute.

TOURS THE COMMON.

Bill (if you call him Mr. Pickett he hardly knows whom you mean) has lived in the South End ever since he came to Boston as a boy of eight, and for fifty years has been sexton of St. Patrick's.

In all that time he has never set foot more than a block or two distant from the beaten track between his home and the church. By no stretch of imagination could Bill be called a "man about town."

But today he tasted, for an hour or two, the dashing career of the

Suffrage Voted by G. O. P. Senators; Lodge Leader

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts today was elected Republican leader to succeed the late Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire. The conference electing Lodge was attended by about thirty Republican Senators. They also passed a resolution favoring the immediate passage of the Susan B. Anthony nation-wide suffrage amendment.

KING WILL CASE MAY BE REOPENED

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 24. — A motion to reopen the celebrated King will case is expected soon as the result of the plaintiff's discovering a new witness, it was learned today. In a letter written by Gaston B. Means from Chicago to J. P. Newell of this place, Means says that the new witness saw the alleged forged will both before and after it was executed.

POLICE PROBING GALLIVAN'S DEATH

A thorough investigation into the death of James F. Gallivan, the South Boston liquor dealer, with a large sum of money missing, who was found unconscious at the bottom of the freight elevator well in the rear of No. 7 Temple place last Monday, and who died at the Relief Hospital early Tuesday morning, was ordered today by the Boston police.

According to the report of Medical Examiner George Magrath, Gallivan died of injuries received in falling about ten feet to the bottom of the well. He sustained a scalp wound and fractured ribs. What caused his fall, however, is a mystery, and this will be the subject of the police probe.

1—Gallivan was found lying face upward, indicating he went into the elevator well backwards.

2—The well, with the elevator at the bottom, was protected from the alleyway by a wooden gate, and by a heavy door, which had been securely bolted on the inside a few hours before he was found. The bolt on this door was not broken, and the gate was raised, showing that Gallivan could not have accidently lunged against the door and fallen.

3—Blood and bits of skin were found beneath Gallivan's finger nails, indicating a struggle.

4—On Tuesday three rough-looking men, one with a badly scratched face, appeared at the building and asked if the man found at the bottom of the elevator well was dead yet. When told he was they hurried away.

RUSH DRAFT BILL IN HOUSE

Reject Plan to Defer Boys of 18; to Pass Senate Monday

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 24—Unencumbered by amendments, the administration man-power bill, extending the draft limits to include all between the ages of 18 and 45, will be passed by the House this afternoon. The bill cannot be passed by the Senate before Monday.

"Too much talk," explained Senator Chamberlain, who has charge of the bill. "If there appears later to be the remotest possibility of putting the bill through today, however, I shall demand a night session."

The House had voted on a dozen amendments to the bill, but the Senate had not passed upon a single proposed alteration when the two houses went into session today.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED.

The House has decisively beaten the McKenzie amendment, designed to withhold men below 20 from service until all others made liable to service under the extended ages had been called. The House had only one major amendment still to consider. This is the duplicate of the Reed-Thomas anti-strike amendment offered by Representative Blanton of Texas. All indications were that the amendment would be voted down.

The House has given definite answer to charges of "slacking on the job" by rescinding that part of the original draft law making members of Congress automatically exempt from its provisions. The Senate cannot well do otherwise than adopt this amendment if it is offered in the upper body. It is estimated that nearly 150 senators and representatives would be made liable under the draft extension.

AFTER "SLACKER" OFFICIALS.

When the House went in session this afternoon its first business was to vote on the Madden amendment which would make all government officials liable to draft. This is the culmination of Madden's campaign against alleged "slackers" in the government departments in which he has had the support of practically the entire House up to this time.

The Senate was prepared to take its first record vote when it reconvened today, balloting on the Reed amendment providing that wives of soldiers and sailors shall not be barred from government employment

RAILROAD LOSS IN JUNE $41,786,926

Washington, Aug. 24.—The railroads of the country have lost $41,786,926 for the month of June this year, compared with a gain of $114,958,023 for the same month in 1917, the Railroad Administration announced today. For the six-month period ending June of this year, the loss was $285,741,473, compared with a gain of $546,918,793 for the six-month period ending June, 1917.

Have to Hold U. S. Troops Back, Says Foch

By International News Service.

Paris, Aug. 23—(Night)—"We've begun and we shall continue," was the way Field Marshal Foch summed up the battle situation when he received correspondents at the front.

The allied generalissimo paid high tribute to the French, British and American troops.

"You may tell the American people," he said to American correspondents, "that the American troops are admirable. They ask no better than to go forward to their death. They can be reproached only for going forward too fast. We have to hold them back."

MARCH PRAISES U. S. FIGHTERS IN FRANCE

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 24.—General March's declaration to the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees, that the man-power of America will win the war was a deliberate military, clod-blooded statement based entirely on military calculations.

The General so informed the newspaper correspondents at his semi-weekly conference today. He stated that his announcement to the committees of both houses that the United States must have an army of four million men overseas next June and a reserve at home of one million was based on knowledge that such an army will win the war.

ABSOLUTELY CONFIDENT.

The chief of staff made it plain that he is absolutely confident of this fact, and that his statements to the committee were in no way of the "spread eagle" type. On the contrary his belief is founded on military deduction based on complete knowledge of American troops with whom he has served.

In making his calculations he also had before him the reports from the Allied commanders, which show the value of the American forces already to the allies.

General March let it be known that he is bringing to the United States several officers who have won great distinction in the fighting in France. Those officers are to be given increased rank and then will whip other units into shape here.

LAUDS AMERICANS WORK.

In announcing this fact the General gave some new information regarding the work of the First and Second Regular Army divisions, commanded respectively in the recent fighting by Major-Generals Robert Lee Bullard and Omar Bundy, since detached and given temporary command of army corps.

The first Regular Army division in one engagement alone, the last offensive in which it was engaged, captured 48 German guns and brought them in on their own trucks. At the same time this division took 3,500 prisoners.

The Second Regular Army division, in its last General March in reply to questions said that the 43rd division is part of the Fifth army corps and is being held behind the lines as a replacement division. The 37th division is part of the Fourth Army corps and is on the line. The 79th is in training behind the lines.

BRITISH CAPTURE 14,000 OF FOE IN 3 DAYS

By EARLE C. REEVES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug. 24 (10:08 p. m.)—The third British army is still advancing on a front of from twelve to fifteen miles and is now within less than two miles of Bapaume, the great German base, the International News Service learned this afternoon.

The British advanced from one to two miles over this front last night. They now seriously threaten the German position along Thiepval Ridge. A German retirement on this front has been contemplated for some time.

JAPANESE ARMY ADVANCING IN SIBERIA

Tokio War Office Issues First Communique—Russian Officers Freed

Tokio, via London, August 24.—Japanese forces are advancing beyond Nikolaievsk, the War Office announces.

The above announcement by the Tokio War Office marks the first Japanese official communique—apart from general reports of Japanese anti-U-boat activities — to reach this country. It marks the arrival of Japan's military forces upon the eastern edge of the world war's arena.

Amsterdam, via London, Aug. 24.—The Bolshevist government, according to Kieff advices, has been forced to release 23,000 former officers in the Russian army who had been imprisoned in the Alexieff Barracks at Moscow. The people of Moscow, the dispatches add, threatened to blow up the Kremlin unless the officers were given their freedom.

15 INJURED AS AUTO AND TROLLEY CRASH

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 24.—Fifteen men were injured, six of them so seriously that they may die, when a jitney bus in which they were riding and a trolley car collided here. The injured were all Remington Arms Company employes and were on their way to work. The six most seriously injured were taken to the General Hospital, where three were reported in a critical condition. The other nine were taken to the Emergency Hospital and given first aid treatment and then sent to their homes.

The Germans withdrew a greater portion of their troops before the attack of last Wednesday. They planned to establish a new line back of the Arras railway after they had destroyed it.

The allies have taken well over a hundred thousand German prisoners since July 18, showing the extent to which the allies are constantly pressing the retreating enemy.

Last night the fourth British army was reported to be in the outskirts of Bray. The capture of the town has not yet been reported.

Germans Are Beaten on Whole 50-Mile Front

Field Marshal Haig's victorious troops renewed their attack today in the big battle in France, where the Germans are being beaten at all points along a 50-mile front from above Arras down to Soissons.

The conflict is already described as the biggest engagement of the western front and has possibilities of developing into the crucial battle of the war.

The enemy already has fearful glimpses of the "handwriting on the wall," according to the Amsterdam correspondent of the London Daily Express. He announces that, fearing an invasion, the inhabitants of the Rhine towns are flocking back to central Germany.

The German fighting forces are striving desperately. Field Marshal von Hindenburg is in charge on the western front. The Germans are rushing extensive fortifications on the Meuse River. Thousands of war prisoners have been pressed into service, digging trenches between Dinant and Givet.

The number of prisoners taken by the allies in the present offensive is estimated at 35,000 in unofficial reports. In three days fighting the British alone have taken 14,000 prisoners.

Von Hindenburg is throwing in reserves, drawn from all sectors, even from the interior of Germany, in strained effort to retire his main bodies with minimum loss and to save his big guns.

Among troops hurried to the front is a force of Rheinish landwehr, which had been specially recruited for service in Finland.

Foch's armies were everywhere successful in the last twenty-four hours. From Arras to Chaulnes the British swept forward, gaining a mile here and five miles there, but always gaining. At no time was the enemy permitted to pause and organize his retreat.

Six miles southeast of Arras the Germans threw in fresh divisions to stop the army of General Byng, but the only result was a greater loss to the enemy. Byng not only crushed the German attempts to attack, but drove forward so vigorously that the retirement of the Prussians virtually became a rout.

General Rawlinson's Anzacs are battling in the outskirts of the great fee base of Chaulnes, having driven the Germans on a front of more than six miles, capturing three towns and many prisoners.

To the north of Rawlinson's attack British forces have driven to within two miles of Roisel, one of the Germans reeling back in confusion.

More than twenty towns have been taken by the British, chief among them being Gomiecourt, Ervillers, Hamelincourt, Boiry-Becquerel and Boyelles.

General von Below, the enemy "repeat expert," despite continuous reinforcements, has been at no place able to sustain his reputation as a specialist in orderly retirement. Even where his forces have been pushed hard by the attacking British and today his army is falling back in fashion which almost amounts to a rout.

MILE AND HALF FROM NOYON.

General Humbert's Third French army, attacking between Noyon and Roye, has forced the passage of the Divette River and is now rapidly approaching Noyon from the west. On the east of Noyon French troops are within one and one-half miles of the city.

General Mangin is continuing his successful advance to the north of Soissons, where the Germans are caught between the fires of the French and American armies. Enemy movements in this part of the battlefield, reported by Allied air observers, indicate a speedy retirement to the old Chemin des Dames line of defence.

But the spreading of the French attacks eastward from the south bank of the Oise is becoming increasingly menacing to the German positions south of the Chemin des Dames, and if the forest country can be penetrated while the enemy is disorganized, even Laon may be menaced.

The Germans held the Coucy forest with desperate tenacity when they retired to the Hindenburg line early in 1917. They also flooded the La Fere region at that time, thus preventing the French from occupying it, but they are now not falling back, according to plan. They are being driven back, and if they are unable to make a stand within a few miles from where they are the whole Vesle front must collapse.

French Successful in Lorraine Raids; Quiet Now on Oise

Paris, Aug. 24 (Noon).—Infantry fighting has apparently died down north of Soissons for the time being. The French War Office today mentioned only lively artillery firing in that sector.

In the Lorraine sector, however, French patrols made many excursions and brought in prisoners.

The text of the official statement follows:

"In the Lassigny region and between the Oise and the Aisne the night was marked by lively artillery activity.

"French detachments penetrated enemy trenches in Lorraine at several points and brought back prisoners.

"Elsewhere the night was calm."

British Renew Drive Near Albert; Have Taken 14,000 in Three Days

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 24 11:55 a. m.—British troops made further progress in their attack on the German lines around Albert, the British War Office announced today.

In the three days fighting since the morning of August 21, the British alone have taken 14,000 prisoners.

The text of the official statement follows:

"Further progress was made in the Albert sector during the night. Some prisoners were taken.

"Early this morning the attack was resumed.

"In the three days fighting since the morning of August 21 we have taken 14,000 prisoners.

"A number of guns also have been captured.

"A successful local operation took place last evening northwest of Neuf Berquin (on the Flanders front). Hostile attacks during the night north of Hailleul and south of Locre and north of Kemmel were driven off after sharp fighting.

"Fighting this morning along the Las Bassee Canal in the Givenchy sector resulted advantageously to the British."

along the Marne, has to say about our fellows.

"'I could not have done better on the same occasion with my best troops.'

"Here is another bouquet from an official French statement:

"'The American division displayed the finest military qualities, discipline which aroused the surprise and admiration of the Germans animated the assaulting sections.'"

The full text of the translation of a French report concerning the fighting of this division on the Marne from July 18 to 25 follows:

"If one wishes to form an opinion of the offensive spirit which animates the Americans and of their tactical methods, he has only to follow in detail the operations of a division from the beginning of our counter-offensive between Chateau-Thierry and Soissons.

"It was on July 18th, at 4 o'clock in the morning, that the order was given to take the first positions of the Germans. The American division, whose movements we are about to trace, held the Bois de Belleau northwest of Chateau-Thierry, and was the pivot of the army of General Degoutte."

YANKEES DRIVE AHEAD.

"Composed mainly of Americans from Boston and Massachusetts, it had succeeded, in this sector, the division which had taken part in the operations in the Bois de Belleau and at Bourescbes, and it asked only to prove itself of a valor equal to that of those excellent troops. But when one is in a pivot position, one must know how to count his steps and to regulate his march according to the progress of the turning flanks.

"It was necessary on that day to moderate the ardor of the Americans, who would gladly have passed beyond their first objective. On the signal for the attack, in fact, the battalions which were in line followed behind the artillery barrage with a perfect discipline, reached the line Torcy-Belleau-Givry and the railroad up to the station at Bourescbes. They had arrived there almost without resistance, and, encouraged by their success, they asked only to push ahead.

"However, it was necessary to clear Montbrers and the Bois de Petret, still strongly occupied by the Germans, before pushing forward the general advance. The French elements on the left engaged in sharp combats to overcome the enemy's resistance.

QUICKLY GAIN HILL.

"In order to assist them, the Americans, on the evening of July 20, undertook a flanking movement which was completely successful. With magnificent audacity, they reached, with one rush, the hill of Etrepilly, from the Goneriin Ferme to La Haimardiere. It was a model sudden attack in which was displayed all the American boldness.

"In spite of a severe machine gun barrage, and, in spite of islets of resistance to which the enemy clung, they advanced two kilometers in depth and three cannon, one heavy trench mortar and some machine guns were captured. In addition 200 prisoners remained in the hands of the division.

"'I could not have done better on the same occasion with my best troops,' declared General Degoutte on hearing of the splendid success of the allies. The Germans found themselves in so precarious a situation at Montbiers that they were obliged to begin their withdrawal.

"On July 21, the entire German lines was in retreat and the highroad from Chateau Thierry to Soissons was reached. The Americans exploited their gains with vigor, cleaning up the ground and pursuing the rear guard of the enemy.

HAND-TO-HAND BATTLE.

"On July 23, a company of Americans penetrated into Epieds. There was terrible hand-to-hand fighting in the village. Besides, owing to the intense barrage from the German heavy artillery, it was necessary both on the right and on the left to cross an open and exposed glacis in order to reach Epieds, or to advance.

"That day it was impossible to gain complete possession of the village, and, rather than suffer useless losses, the commander of the American division preferred to draw back his units to the rear. It was necessary, if one wished to overcome the difficulty, to begin a new enveloping movement, and, for that reason, on July 23 the Americans sought to infiltrate by the Bois de Trugny, south of Epieds.

"The Germans resisted this attempt violently and counter-attacked with energy. But they learned to their cost what American tenacity is. Checked in their manoeuvre the first time, the Americans took the edge of the wood on July 24, penetrated it boldly, capturing an entire company of German pioneers, and continued their advance with such obstinacy that about 3 o'clock they were at the borders of the Forest de Fere, and, on the same evening, reached the road from Fere-en-Tardenois to Lucignone.

"Thus, the American division has in six days realized in some points a gain of seventeen kilometers in depth, fighting day and night without rest and displaying the finest military qualities.

"All the liaison service operated with perfect regularity, as well to the right and to the left as inside the division itself.

MODELS OF DISCIPLINE.

"A discipline which aroused the surprise and admiration of the Germans animated the assaulting sections.

"They marched with their officers at the head and their flis closers just as in French units. German prisoners could not get over it.

"'We do not see enough of those who command us,' they declared to the Americans. You are lucky. You are like the French, who always have their officers in front of them to lead them into battle.'

"It is right to add that the French and American commanding officers worked in no less close harmony than the troops during these actions.

"The general commanding the American division is a leader characterized by breath of view, by strictness in orders and by a practical mind. Disposing himself without thought, he met from the first the problems which presented themselves to him, with a mastery that cost the enemy dear.

"Those days from July 18 to July 25 are a new and striking proof of what the entente between the United States and France can do upon the battle field."

P. S.—And, if I may be pardoned for suggesting, this is only the beginning for the fellows from home.

WHERE ALLIES ARE ROLLING FOE BACK

The Germans were rolled back yesterday on a front of twenty-three miles between the Cojeul River, just south of Arras, and Lihons, south of the Somme. The great attack was made by the British third army, under General Byng, and the British fourth army, under General Rawlinson. Their advance is shown on the map by the solid black area marked (A). Between the Oise and the Aisne (B) General Mangin's tenth army swept the Germans back to within three miles of Chauny. One report says the French have reached the borders of Coucy-le-Chateau, only three miles from the "Hindenburg line."

on the ground of their married status.

An amendment to take in all aliens who are subjects of any of the countries associated with this country in the war also was adopted by the House.

Final action on the bill yesterday was blocked by Republican members, who precipitated an amendment to draft all the clerks employed on war work in the government departments. Chairman Dent, in charge of the bill, pleaded in vain that the adoption of such an amendment would absolutely destroy the efficiency of the War Department, the Shipping Board and other departments doing war work.

Congressmen voted to include themselves in the draft by adopting with a cheer an amendment by Representative Gregg of Texas to make every legislative and executive official of the United States Government and the States liable to service.

An amendment to take in all aliens who are subjects of any of the countries associated with this country in the war also was adopted.

Final action on the bill was blocked by Republican members, who precipitated an amendment to draft all the clerks employed on war work in the government departments. Chairman Dent, in charge of the bill, pleaded in vain that the adoption of such an amendment would absolutely destroy the efficiency of the War Department, the Shipping Board and other departments doing war work.

He was finally obliged to ask to have the final vote on the bill put over in spite of the fact that it had been hoped by the War Department and all those vitally interested in the success of the new draft to have the bill passed.

Practically the entire day was spent in the debate on the McKenzie amendment to classify the boys of eighteen and nineteen so that they would be the last to be called into service. Mr. McKenzie was the principal speaker in support of his amendment, although he was assisted by Chairman Dyer of the rules committee, Connelly of Texas, Fairfield of Indiana, Gordon of Ohio and others. Tilson of Connecticut, Longworth and Fess of Ohio, and Cannon of Illinois were the chief speakers against it.

During the debate on the McKenzie amendment the most dramatic incident of the session occurred when Representative Albert Johnson of Washington, a violent opponent of the conscription of boys of eighteen, brought to the bar of the House two young pages dressed in the full accoutrements of the soldier, under which they visibly staggered. Johnson declared both the boys were over eighteen, and introduced them as "horrible examples" of what would happen if all the youths of that age in the country should be taken.

Then came the startling denouement to Johnson's exhibit. Tilson of Connecticut taking the floor and calling upon four young marines, who were seated in the gallery, to stand and show themselves to the House as samples of what the boys of 18 could be. The applause that greeted the appearance of the marines was deafening. Tilson added to the effectiveness of the scene by charging that Johnson had selected for his exhibit boys who were not up to the standard of the average American youth of 18.

Later in the day, Connelly of Texas insinuated that Tilson had "planted" the marines in the gallery for the purpose. Tilson only smiled at this statement and allowed it to pass unnoticed.

The long debate failed to shake the strength of the large portion of the House membership which favored the original bill. It was after 6 o'clock when the debate ended and the House was ready to vote.

First came an amendment by Johnson of Washington to make the draft ages eighteen to forty-five. This was defeated by the vote of 90 to 172.

Next was a vote on an amendment offered by Blackmon of Alabama to change the ages to twenty-one to forty-five. This was turned down by the vote of 42 to 184.

THREE U. S. SHIPS ARE SUNK IN EUROPE

Lake Edon, Westbridge and Cubore Victims of Foe Sea Raiders

Washington, Aug. 24.—The Navy Department has received a cablegram stating that the steamship Lake Edon, an army chartered cargo transport, was sunk by enemy submarine in European waters August 21. There were forty-nine in the crew; sixteen are reported missing. The names of those missing were not given in the dispatch.

Reports received by the department show that three firemen were lost in the sinking of the U. S. S. Westbridge by a submarine in foreign waters on August 16. The Westbridge was a cargo ship of 8,500 tons deadweight, in government service and was westward bound when torpedoed.

The U. S. S. Cubore, 7,300 gross tons, was torpedoed and sunk on August 15 in European waters, on westbound voyage. Reports state that there was no loss of life in the sinking of the Cubore.

SECOND ARREST IS PLANNED IN DEATH OF MAINE PASTOR'S WIFE

PROSECUTION IS "SATISFIED" BY AUTOPSY, DECLARES COUNTY ATTORNEY

Wells, Me. Aug. 24—Another arrest is expected to be made in the case of the Rev. Henry H. Hall, charged with the death of his wife, according to Deputy Sheriff C. T. Ricker of Waterboro.

The sheriff stated that he has been conducting an investigation which may soon warrant him taking into custody the person suspected.

A new witness has been found who claims that he saw the accused pastor while he was bending over his injured wife on the day of the alleged crime. He is Winfield Leach, a recluse who lives near the spot where Mrs. Hall was found.

From Portland comes word that Grace Gerow received $100 from her father to pay for her tuition at a business college in that city. It was at first reported that Hall had paid for the girl's schooling.

Miss Kate Gerow declared in a statement here that Mrs. Hall was not jealous of her. She also stated that her sister Grace had no other interest in the pastor than that of a religious nature.

Judge Emery, Hall's counsel, asserts that his client is innocent. He declares the prosecution is the result of the idle gossip of a Wells man, whom he claims is pro-German.

Meanwhile Hall is at the county jail at Alfred. He sings gospel songs and whistles during the day, according to Deputy Sheriff George F. Wiggin of Springvale.

The sheriff also said that when not engaged in prayer, Hall's manner is light and humorous. He stated that he seems to enjoy his easy life at the jail and asks only for the daily papers. He claims he appears carefree in his talk.

Seventeen-year-old Rest Green (Katie) Gerow, with whom the accused minister is declared to have been infatuated before his wife's death, has not been seen in the village since the day following Hall's arrest. When seen at Bald Hill, the Gerow homestead, Katie talked freely of the case. In response to questions, she said:

"When Mrs. Hall was attending her landlady, Mrs. Ward Hatch, who was ill, I was sent for to do the kitchen work at the Hall home. Mr. Hall was awfully nice to his wife when I was there, and I never saw anything out of the way between them.

"Mrs. Hall was as nice to me as she could be. I don't think she could have been jealous of me, as some folks say. Do you suppose that Mrs. Hall would have sent for me to help around her house if she was jealous of me? I don't. Women are not like that.

DEFENDS SISTER GRACE.

"My sister, Grace, got Mr. Hall to go to the Pentecostal Church with her in Portland. Grace is awfully religious. She is of 'the faith,' and Mr. Hall tried hard to be of 'the faith,' too."

By "the faith" Katie Gerow explained that she meant the faith known as that practiced by the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene. Pressed to explain the chief characteristic of that sect, Katie replied:

"Oh, they have more faith than other religions, I guess. Anyway, Grace had more faith. She is a great Bible student."

Katie Gerow denied the insinuation of Wells Depot gossips that she ever met the minister clandestinely and held hands with him near the bridge at "Little River."

"I never held hands with Mr. Hall at the bridge. My mother doesn't let me go out of the house nights. Rev. Mr. Hall came to our house when he called and we sat in the sitting-room together," declared Katie spiritedly, her black eyes flashing with hot indignation.

More light on "the faith" in which the accused minister and Miss Grace Gerow were deeply interested, was shed by County Attorney Franklin R. Chesley of Saco. Attorney Chesley related how he went with the sheriff to interview the Gerow girls at their home at Bald Hill on Wednesday and told of his experience with Grace, the oldest Gerow girl.

"It was certainly a unique experience," declared Attorney Chesley. "Grace answered all my questions as to her residence, movements and religious affiliations with a fair degree of promptness. She is a quick witted girl mentally, I should judge. But when I would ask her a pointed question regarding her relations with Rev. Mr. Hall she seemed lost for a reply.

TELLS OF PRAYER SPELLS.

"She would gaze at the corner of the ceiling with a rapt, far away look in her eyes and remain motionless for as many as five minutes without answering my questions. When I became impatient at her apparent indifference to my interrogations and opened my mouth to speak to her, Mrs. Gerow, her mother, would touch my arm, motioning me to keep silent, and whisper, 'Sh, Sh, don't interrupt her. She's in prayer.'

"Grace had one of her so-called prayer spells every time I led up to her relations with Hall. It was very embarrassing. Needless to say, I did not get very far with her on that tack under the prayer spell program. I never saw anything so peculiar."

Arrangements were made, it was stated, for former York County Attorney Hiram Willard to handle the prosecution of Hall in case Attorney Chesley is called to the colors as an ensign in the navy. Attorney Chesley recently enlisted in the naval service and is expecting to be called from his official duties at any time, according to friends.

At least twelve witnesses will be called to testify against the accused minister at the preliminary hearing scheduled for August 29, it was announced by Attorney Chesley. Meanwhile, there is a scramble on the part of Mr. Hall's former parishioners at the Union Baptist Church to escape being called as witnesses against the deposed minister. People who were foremost in criticising Mr. Hall for his alleged indiscretions have shut up like clams at the approach of the authorities, and a perfect group of virtuous "know nothings" is the result.

MINISTERS SUPPORT PASTOR.

Prominent Baptist ministers of neighboring towns are already interesting themselves in Hall's case, and one New York minister in particular, who is spending the Summer in Wells Beach, is said by Hall's staunch supporters to have offered to back Hall to the limit in proving his innocence.

The expected arrest which Deputy Sheriff Ricker says is soon to take place in connection with the case is causing no end of speculation.

States Grace Gerow's Father Gave Her $100 for School Tuition

Portland, Aug. 24. — Grace Gerow has found a defender in the person of Mrs. Ethel W. Hamilton of No. 53 Wilmot street, Portland. Mrs. Hamilton asserts her belief in the innocence of any wrong doing on the part of the girl. She also expresses some confidence in Hall.

Hans L. Mortenson, father of Mrs. Hamilton, declares there is not any truth to the story that Hall paid Grace Gerow's tuition at a business college here. He asserts the girl received a check for $100 from her father who is working for the government in Virginia, and that the money was for the purpose of paying for the girl's schooling.

Mortenson stated that he deposited the check in a bank for Miss Gerow.

In discussing the case Mrs. Hamilton said:

"For two years Grace has been living with me, and I know that she is honest, upright and has a sterling Christian character. She lived in my house at Laconia, N. H., for two years and took care of my children up to the death of my husband in December. During that time she never had a letter from any man or any communications whatsoever or even had a man visit her during the period.

"She is a devout Christian girl and her character should not be questioned in the least. She is an ardent church goer and seems to be all wrapt up in religion. The stories and rumors which have been going around to the effect that they knew each other and were friendly before the death of Mrs. Hall are absurd.

"Grace never knew Mr. Hall except that he was pastor of the church in that town, until he came to this city to the hospital for treatment and she told me a little before he came here that she expected that the pastor of the church in her town was coming to this city for treatment and that she felt it her duty, as he was a stranger in this town, to go and see him, and this she did, but purely as a Christian act.

"Although she was not living at my home during that time I saw her or talked with her every day. What she did for Mr. Hall in the way of kindness during his stay here was purely out of a sense of Christian duty. If she had thought for a moment that her motive was to be questioned she would have severed all connections with him at the very start."

According to Mrs. Hamilton Hall called her up once or twice while in this city. She says she (Mrs. Hamilton) met Hall and Grace Gerow once on the street, which was the only time she ever saw Mr. Hall.

Autopsy Performed on the Body of Mrs. Hall Satisfies Prosecutor

Biddeford, Aug. 24.—Deputy Sheriff Ernest L. Jones of Kennebec is still seeking "Mrs. Allen of Portland" whom he seeks to interview as a result of statements made by the seventy-one-year-old mother-in-law of Henry H. Hall, the Wells pastor. He pushed his investigation in Portland without success.

Prosecutor Chesley conferred with Medical Examiner Traynor regarding the autopsy the medical examiner performed in the Mill River Baptist Church, West Harrington.

"I am satisfied with the report of the autopsy made by Dr. Traynor," was Attorney Chesley's sole official statement.

While the prosecution is going ahead with the preparation of its case, the defence is equally active. Judge Emery, who will efend Hall, has issued a statement in which he asserts that his client is innocent. He denies many of the charges that have been made against the accused pastor.

Judge Emery attributes the prosecution to the idle gossip of a Wells man. He charges this man with being pro-German.

Pastor Sang Solo at Princeton Two Days After Wife's Funeral

Princeton, Me., Aug. 24.—The Rev. Henry H. Hall came here from Harrington and conducted a Baptist parish one year up to the Fall of 1917. He was rejected by some members of the parish, but was elected pastor for three months. He resigned in January last and left with his wife and daughter for Wells.

While here the names of two women were mentioned in connection with that of the pastor.

Everyone declares that Hall was a wonderful and magnetic preacher.

Hall came to Princeton last June, the day following the burial of his wife in Harrington, arriving here on Saturday. He was not asked to preach in his former Baptist church, but called on the Sunday school class.

On Sunday night he sang a solo in the Advent Christian Church, and many villagers commented on the matter, owing to the fact the preacher had buried his wife only two days prior to this time.

NOTE WARNED GIRL ON DAY OF DEATH RIDE

Edith Janny, Rahway, N. J., girl who was one of the victims in the mysterious murder when she and Arthur L. Kupfer of Perth Amboy were shot to death in an automobile on their return from a beach resort.

Rahway, N. J., Aug. 24.—Two jealous men, an anonymous letter, finger-prints and a footprint were among the latest clews holding the attention of the police today in their investigation of the double auto murder.

The dual crime was the shooting of Arthur L. Kupfer and Miss Edith Janny of Perth Amboy in Kupfer's automobile on the Linden road early Thursday morning. The bodies of the victims were flung from the death car into the gutter.

The anonymous letter, now in the possession of Prosecutor Hetfield, was received by Miss Janny last Monday, two days before she started on the fatal ride late Wednesday evening.

The letter demanded that the girl cease receiving attentions from Kupfer. Prosecutor Hetfield admitted today that the letter had direct bearing on the double assassination, although he refused to say whether open threats were made in it against either Miss Janny or Kupfer.

SEARCH GIRL'S CORRESPONDENCE

Detectives are rounding up all Miss Janny's correspondence possibly in hope of securing a clew to the writer of the anonymous letter, such as a signed letter in the same handwriting.

Two jealous men, one of whom may have sent the anonymous letter, have been reported to the police in connection with the case.

Miss Janny's charm of nineteen years and girlish comeliness engaged many masculine admirers.

Her work as dining room cashier at the Hotel Madison in Perth Amboy made it easy for acquaintances to approach her. A week ago last Sunday a man was heard to reproach the girl bitterly. M. A. McCoy, a structural ironworker, overheard this man's complaint. He said to the pretty cashier:

"You aren't using me right. You've thrown me down for another man. You think too much of him because he has money."

Kupfer's salary as superintendent of the Perth Amboy cigar factory was $100 a month. He had an interest in the factory, too. He lived well and was able to send his mother $50 a month, although his mother is described as being in comfortable circumstances.

On the theory that this dining room complainant was jealous of Kupfer the police are trying zealously to locate the man.

The other man whom the police seek, on the ground that he, too, was jealous of Kupfer, is said to have threatened Kupfer, so as to make the factory superintendent fear violence.

A week ago Kupfer pointed out this man on a Perth Amboy street and said to a friend:

"See that fellow. He will get me some day. He's got it in for me. I'm not to blame but he's got it in for me and he'll get me."

Finger-prints may play a vital part in clearing up the murder mystery. These prints are on the polished rim of the wheel of Kupfer's car.

Are they the prints of "death fingers" of one of the assassins of the man and the girl who were shot down from behind and without warning as the car sped along the night road to Rahway.

DEATH CAR GUARDED.

The police are jealously guarding the car and the wheel so that these finger-prints shall not be disturbed, in case an arrest is made.

It is argued that one of the assassins must have been driving when the car was slowed to the curb in front of Dr. Frank Moore's house, where the dying Kupfer was thrown out.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS APPEARS ONCE MORE

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Two cases of infantile paralysis developed today at Evanston, a suburb of Chicago. The victims are Lawrence Lester, nineteen, and Bud Andrews, sixteen.

LONG DISTANCE HIKERS, HERE'S A CALL!

New England Champion Invites All to Join Him in Boston-Pawtucket Stroll

Long distance walkers of Greater Boston, attention! How would you like to take a little stroll on Labor Day, from Boston to Pawtucket, a distance over the road of say forty miles more or less?

Here is your chance to get rid of the kinks in your legs and to work up a good appetite for the day, by joining Michael Pistachio's little strolling party. He, with ten other men, intends to just as a diversion, starting from the Boston AMERICAN office, and winding up before the day is ended in the busy Rhode Island town. The start will be made at 6 o'clock in the morning, and the auto route will be followed.

Pistachio, who claims to be the champion long distance walker of New England, lives at No. 530 Charles street, Marysville, near Pawtucket, R. I. He has already made several walks, one from the Pawtucket Times office to Los Angeles, Cal., starting August 22, 1911, and finishing the trip on January 9, 1912. Aonther was from New York to Providence on June 10 to June 14, 1908. Other walks have been covered by him through New England.

A cordial invitation is extended by Pistachio to all Boston men who would care to join his party by meeting at the AMERICAN office on Labor Day for the start.

ANOTHER SCORCHER TO BE CONTINUED

Another scorching day. The weather bureau predicted a real hot one, with the temperature constantly rising. And the bureau was right. The forecast is that it will continue fair tonight and Sunday with not much change in temperature. With the exception of local showers along the New England Coast fair weather prevailed over the country. Warm weather continues in the northeast with cooler weather in the western part. The lowest temperature in New England was at Eastport, Me., as usual, where it registered 54 and the highest 74 in Boston and Portland, Me.

WAR PRISONER SEES PLOT TO WIN GIRL

Webster, Aug. 24.—Phillip D. Levenson, of No. 47 Irving street, Worcester, under arrest here as a draft evader, says it is all a plot to rob him of his girl.

"But" he adds "it can't be done."

Levenson was fighting mad when he was placed behind the bars and asserted that Patrolman Patrick F. Canty should have known better than to have arrested him, as he is in Class 1-A, limited service.

"I live in Worcester, I come to Webster every week," he said. "I have a girl here and it looks as if someone might be trying to get me out of the way so that he can get her. But I tell you it can't be done."

CHICAGO POLICE TO HONOR DEAD CHIEF

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler will be buried Monday morning. The body will lie in state for two hours. An escort of 800 policemen will march in the funeral procession. Eight police captains will act as pallbearers.

'FAKE' GAMBLING RAIDS, CHARGES HOTEL MAN

"Frame-Up" Followed Political Row, Declares Narragansett Pier Man

Narragansett Pier, Aug. 24.—Albert Lazarre, proprietor of the Gladstone House, created a sensation here by charging that the recent gambling raids by High Sheriff John R. Wilcox were "fakes." Sheriff Wilcox denies the charges.

Men on the inside of the local gambling situation declare that the raids and the sensational charges are aftermaths of the falling out between Jim Connolley and Johnny Joyce, partners at the Elms, who differed concerning the candidacy of Captain Harry P. Kane for the presidency of the Town Council.

Connolley and Joyce have a gaming house in Clarke's Block, with an entrance through the Elms. Joyce is said to back Kane, and Connolley to have opposed him. Kane was defeated, and Connolley and his friends are said, therefore, to be favored by the party in power.

Local gamblers of the Joyce faction say that the recent raids were framed so that friends of Connolley were tipped off and given time to clean out their places, while the Joyce men were not tipped off, and did not expect a visit from the raiders. The result was that in four places visited by the sheriff and his squad there was no sign of gambling.

Lazarre claims that the roulette wheel seized in a room of his hotel belonged to Paul Hines, a guest at the hotel, and that the sheriff discriminated against the Gladstone House in the matter.

RICH "IDLER" CAN'T FIND SUITABLE JOB

Port Chester, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The police are much perturbed over the failure of John B. Goodwin, a wealthy resident, to find suitable employment. He is thirty-six and is prominent as an amateur dramatic coach and tennis player. Of late he has busied himself about the estate of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Goodwin. Chief Magistrate John Coward held him in contempt of court for failure to appear in answer to a summons issued at the demand of neighbors who charged him with being an idler. He stayed away from court at the suggestion of his attorney, F. W Sherman, who held the proceedings were defective as the complants were not put in affidavit form. No step has been taken to cause Mr. Goodwin's arrest.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS IN R. I. IRON PLANT

Providence, Aug. 24—Fire partially destroyed the plant of the Rhode Island Malleable Iron Works at Hills Grove, about nine miles from the centre of the city, with a heavy loss. The kneading room and pattern room were gutted, and thousands of dollars' worth of patterns were destroyed. The concern was making castings for the government. The fire started in the kneading room, where there are several large boilers. An overheated boiler is thought to have started the blaze, which was discovered by a watchman. Aid was sent from Cranston.

PORTSMOUTH JANITOR MARRIES FOR 6TH TIME

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 24.—Eugene Sheafe, 69, a well-known resident and janitor at the Morley Button Manufacturing Company has entered the matrimonial state for the sixth time, and the return of a marriage certificate at City Hall is the first public news that Clara Emma Brown, 44, an operator at the factory is now Mrs. Sheafe. The couple were married by the Rev. William P. Stanley of the Middle Street Baptist Church. Mrs. Sheafe's home was at West Rye, N. H. Death claimed Mr. Sheafe's previous wives.

SAYS DOCTOR ALIENATED HIS WIFE'S AFFECTIONS

Milford, Aug. 24.—Dr. Robert E. Beardsley of New Britain, Ct., is suing Dr. Henry T. Bray, a physician and surgeon of that city, for $40,000 for alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

Mrs. Beardsley is widely known in North Oxford and this locality, being the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Beaumont of North Oxford. She was married August 3, 1908, and lived in New Britain until May, when she returned to Oxford.

OBJECTOR PAYS PENALTY FOR KILLING DEPUTY

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 24.—Ben Caughron, member of the Working Class Union, was electrocuted in the State Prison for the murder of Charles Kirkland, a deputy, who was shot to death last April in a raid on Caughron's home in Polk County. The raid followed attempted draft evasion by Caughron.

POLITE BURGLARS LOCK DOOR UPON DEPARTING

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 24.—Hungry burglars broke into a grocery store here and stole several pies and cakes. About $3 in change was also taken, but no attempt was made to rob the cash register. The change was in the pastry case. They locked the door upon departing.

CAMBRIDGE MAN SUES ELEVATED FOR $5,000

The Boston Elevated has been sued for $5,000 by Charles F. Davidson of Cambridge. He alleges that on May 25 while riding on a car in East Cambridge some employes of the company threw a quantity of sand into the car, striking him.

COSTS WOMAN $239 A YEAR TO DRESS

General Electric Employes Give Figures in Plea for Pay Increase

Bachelors who are hesitating about taking the fatal step which leads to matrimony may as well know now as at any other time that it costs a woman only $239 a year to dress.

Canadian women employes of the General Electric Company supplied the information in a plea for higher wages. This is what they estimated it would cost them each year:

"BREAK 'ER DOWN" IS CRY AT BROCKTON PLAYOUT

Brockton, Aug. 24.—"The Bawbee of Quincy will squirt next. Altogether now, boys, whoop 'er up. Faster, faster. Thar, I guess that'll get fust money."

Though only fourteen handtubs competed in the New England Veteran Firemen's muster on the Brockton Fair grounds today, the fewest ever known, the old-time pep was not lacking and the red flannel shirted firemen who have not been called to the colors "whooped 'er up" as in days of yore.

After a parade through the streets the playout was begun with Live Oak of Somerville first to wet the paper. In order the other tubs participating were:

Hingham Vets of Hingham, Protection No. 1 of Brookville, Alabama Coon of Stoughton, Okommakamesit of Marblehead, Enterprise No. 2 of Brockton, Washington No.1 of Wickford, R. I., Bawbee of Quincy, Hancock No. 1 of Brockton, Red Jacket of Cambridge, White Angel of Salem, Protection No. 3 of Brockton, Union of East Braintree and Winnissimett of Chelsea.

TWO BROTHERS DIE ON THE SAME DAY

Two brothers, Patrick C. Fahey, 59, and Michael J. Fahey, 57, living with their sister, Mrs. William M. Mannion of 43 Riverdale avenue, Newton, died within a few hours of each other, both in ignorance of the others' death. Neither was married. They had been chums through life. Michael became ill and was sent to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Patrick after visiting him returned to his home at Riverdale avenue and was found dead in bed by his sister. Within five minutes word came that Michael had died at the hospital.

AVIATION SCHOOL AT TECH TO CLOSE

The United States Military Aviation School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will close after the graduation of the aviators now studying there, which will be in two or three weeks, it is announced. The government plans to discontinue several aviation schools in order to concentrate hte training of men in this branch. Tech officials announce that airdome, engine and motor sheds can be used by the aviation detachment of the United States Navy.

ANOTHER U. S. BUREAU AIDS ESPIONAGE ACT

The establishment of a United States Customs Intelligence Bureau to aid the enforcement of the espionage act, was announced today by Edward Billings, collector of the port of Boston. Deputy Collector Darling is chief of the new department and Deputy Surveyor Mann is his assistant. Viseing passports, the issuing of seamen' certificate of citizenship, identification cards for coastwise service and camera permits will be among the duties taken over by this department.

25 YEARS' HARD LABOR FOR PEACE-LOVING MAN

Camp Lewis, Wash., Aug. 24.—Private William H. Edwards of Salt Lake City, who said he would not defend his own life with force, is now serving a sentence of twenty-five years at hard labor on Alcatraz Island. He refused to do non-combatant work around the military camp here because he does not believe in aiding the war in any way.

INJURED BY FALLING PLASTER, ASKS $5,000

Edward A. Packard of Boston has been sued for $5,000 by Nathan Cohen of Malden. Cohen alleges that on June 10 while living in a house at No. 40 Faulkner street, Malden, which is owned by the defendant, he was severely injured when some plastering fell upon him.

SOUTH BOSTON DOCTORS VOTE INCREASED FEES

South Boston physicians have voted a new scale of fees to become effective September 1. Office calls on and after that date will be $2 instead of $1, as formerly. Other new fees are, House calls, $3; calls between 11 p. m. and 8 a. m., $4, and calls for confinement cases, $20 and upward.

Thousands Enroll Under 21-Year-Old Rule

This was draft enrollment day for Uncle Sam's boys who reached voting age since June 5 of this year.

It was figured that the nationwide enrollment of youths coming within this schedule ran to 150,000, with the Bay State contributing upwards of 5,000.

The rule under which today's registration came was as follows:

"All male persons who have reached their twenty-first birthday since June 5, 1918, and on or before today, must register today between the hours of 7 a. m. and 9 p. m."

Exception was made, however, for the orthodox Jews and youths of other religious sects that customarily observe Saturday as the Sabbath instead of Sunday.

These draftees may register either tomorrow or Monday, but must register either one day or the other. This choice of registration is not permissible to those who observe Sunday as the Sabbath.

Registration to those eligible is imperative. Cases of wilful failure to register will be treated as heretofore. These men lose their right to claim deferred classification and may be immediately inducted into military service. They are also liable to prosecution by the department of justice, the penalty being one year's imprisonment.

MARCH TO SPEED UP SOLDIERS' PAY CHECKS

Chief of Staff Also Assures Senators Casualty Lists Are Given Without Delay

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee asked General March, chief of staff, today to take action to have all American troops, overseas or in the United States, paid at regular intervals. The Senators told the general they have found that many men failed to get their money when due and that this had caused hardship.

The chief of staff promised a complete investigation, and an immediate remedy of the conditions complained of.

Senators also expressed a belief that the casualty lists were not coming through from France as fast as they might. It was stated by members later, however, that General March said all casualty lists were made public without any delay.

General March told the Senators that all of the late news from the front was most gratifying. The British-French offensive is proceeding exactly as planned, he said. Men and supplies are going over seas in accordance with the original schedule. The shipping situation is satisfactory, he stated.

ADJUSTS LABOR TROUBLE AT CAMBRIDGE PLANT

Henry B. Endicott has adjusted the labor trouble at the E. A. Benchley & Co., Inc., plant at East Cambridge, where important work in the construction of government life rafts is being done. The men have been out since last Tuesday. They ask more wages, a reduction in hours and a change in the over-time system. The entire matter will be submitted to Mr. Endicott for arbitration.

Both sides agreed that there shall be no strike or lock-out during the war, and in the event of any dispute arising, it shall be submitted to arbitration.

RUSSIAN INSURGENTS BEATEN BY GERMANS

Amsterdam, Aug. 24.—German troops have repulsed 1,200 Russian insurgents at Kremintchug, according to a dispatch received by the Vossische Zeitung from Kieff. Near Poltava, the dispatch said, the Germans also repulsed another group of 800 insurgents and cut the railways to Moscow. According to an unconfirmed report the Czecho-Slav forces have captured Verchi and Uurusk.

PEGGY BRANDON IS NAMED IN DIVORCE

New York, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Edna T. Slayback yesterday started a Supreme Court action for divorce against William A. Slayback, wealthy broker. She names Peggy Brandon, actress. Mrs. Slayback formerly was Edna Taft, a society belle. Some time ago Mrs. Slayback sued Miss Bertha S. M. Seymour for $100,000 damages, charging alienation of the affections of Slayback.

CHARGE PROFITEERING BY WORCESTER LANDLORDS

Worcester, Aug. 24.—When Mayor Pehr G. Holmes returns from his vacation he will find a new problem facing him. A committee from the Central Labor Union will appear before him in regard to the rent question in Worcester. Rent profiteering is the charge. The committee believes that more than 1,000 cases can be pointed out to the Mayor of profiteering by Worcester landlords.

UNDER TREATMENT AFTER HEARING OF U. S. GAIN

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 24.—News of American victories over the Germans on the Western front so excited Conrad Hopfeld, seventy-two years old, widower, of this city, that he was taken to the City Hospital for observation.

ARMY CASUALTY LISTS CONTAIN 130 NAMES

28 of Number Dead, 78 Wounded—31 on New England Roll of Honor

Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—Two army casualty lists issued today by the War Department contained 124 names. In addition to these Secretary Baker's offices announced six casualty corrections, which, added to the current lists, make a total of 130 names.

New England's roll of honor contains thirty-one names, the majority of which come under the head of "wounded severely." Nineteen Massachusetts boys are on the day's roll of honor.

The Army lists are divided as follows:

Killed in action, 9; died of wounds, 12; died of accident, 6; died of disease, 1; wounded severely 73; wounded, degree undetermined, 5; missing in action, 17; prisoner, 1.

Officers in today's lists are:

OFFICERS.

KILLED IN ACTION.

LIEUTENANT.

Ewing Boone, Kansas City, Kan.

SEVERELY WOUNDED.

LIEUTENANT

Howard J. Cummings, Clinton, Mass.

PRISONER.

Corporal Edward F. Foley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foley, of 39 Beecher place, Newton Centre, has been severely wounded while fighting with the American forces in France according to a telegram received today from the War Department. Corporal Foley, who is 24 years old, was a member of the old Fifth Regiment, M. V. M., before that company was merged into the 101st Infantry, U. S. A. He was born in Newton and attended Newton High School.

STRANGE PARALLEL IN TWO MILITARY CAREERS

Denver, Col., Aug. 24.—A strange parallel is found in the military careers of two Colorado men, now members of the Marine Corps.

Jay B. Nash, of Denver, enlisted in the Marines in June, 1910. Homer Jarvis, of Pueblo, joined the same branch of the service on the same date. The men met at Mare Island, Cal., became members of the same company, and were sent to the Philippines as messmates. They completed two enlistments without being separated, and both were discharged at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 21, 1917. Here they separated, both coming the Colorado. A few days ago the former comrades again met in the Denver Marines recruiting station, whither each had gone to re-enlist.

1,400 WOMEN EMPLOYED ON PENN. RY. IN JUNE

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—More than 1,400 women have been employed by the eastern lines during June to do every kind of work, from cleaning locomotives to leading track gangs. Before the war women were rarely taken into the railroad's service, but since it began 9,354 have been employed. This is an increase of 1,945 over last year.

Women are now working in sixty-nine classified occupations on Pennsylvania roads and have invaded manual labor, which was formerly regarded as being filled only by men.

DR. HUTZ HELD IN JAIL AT EAST CAMBRIDGE

Chemist to Be Examined by U. S. Attorney Boynton on Monday

Dr. Rudolph Hutz of No. 29 Greenough avenue, Jamaica Plain, who was arrested by the New Hampshire Federal authorities, is now confined in the East Cambridge Jail as a dangerous German alien enemy. Teh chemist's removal from New Hampshire to this city was ordered by the Department of Justice at Washington.

Soon after arriving in Boston, Hutz was taken before George E. Kelener of the Department of Justice where, following a brief interview he was brought to United States Marshal Mitchell's office and booked.

Hutz remained in Marshal Mitchell's office about an hour preparatory to his being taken to the East Cambridge jail with two other prisoners.

When he arrived at the marshal's office Dr. Hutz carried with him two large valises which had the appearance of being very heavy. He took them with him to the jail.

Dr. Hutz will be brought to the Federal Building Monday, where he will be examined by United States Attorney Thomas J. Boynton.

JURY REFUSES TO INDICT ALDERMEN

Chicago, Aug. 24—The grand jury has refused to indict aldermen in connection with State Attorney Hoyne's traction boodle charges. It is announced that conviction cannot be secured on available evidence.

CHARGES GAS CO. IS CHEATING PROVIDENCE

Expert Alleges Unfair Practices in Making of Coke and Gas

Providence, Aug 24—At the windup of the hearings of the Providence Gas Company before the Public Utilities Commission, Alton P. Adams, of Boston, employed as expert by the city of Providence, charged that the records of the gas company were fictitious.

Chairman Bliss at once objected to what he termed hearsay evidence. He declared that it presented a very bad appearance to the public, besides being unfair to the company. He called upon Adams for an explanation.

Adams said that coke, made and paid for in the manufacture of coal gas, was charged up against making water gas. He contended that coke thus made was fully paid for in the cost of that gas and it was unfair to take coke, which at that stage cost the company nothing, and charge it against water gas at the rate of the market price.

Later in his testimony he said he found that the company bought coal for $7 instead of $8.17, as it claimed.

The hearing is over as far as the taking of testimony is concerned. Further exhibits will be filed by the city as well as by the company, which seeks to raise the price of gas to consumers. Arguments in the case will be heard Wednesday morning.

Gunners Hold Dance

Worcester, Aug. 24.—The machine gunners' battalion at Camp Devens are making arrangements to hold a dance in the Casino on September 20.

3,000 at Nantasket See Girl Rescued From Drowning

A thrilling rescue from drowning was witnessed by 3,000 people at Nantasket Beach when Elias F. Shamon, clerk at the Nantasket Beach Hotel, struggled 300 yards to shore with a young girl who was seized with cramps. She refused to give her name. Both Shamon and the girl were exhausted.

The girl, apparently about 18, was swimming far out from shore. Shamon was about 30 yards away when he saw her suddenly sink and heard her cries for help. He went to her assistance and fought his way back to shallow water. The girl was unable to walk on her right foot, which was cramped, and was assisted to a cottage nearby by friends.

ALLAN G. BUTTRICK BREAKS LEG AT DRILL

Allan G. Buttrick of Lancaster, ex-State Senator and prominent Boston lawyer, is at Clinton Hospital suffering from a fracture of the right leg received while taking part in a drill at the State camp at Famingham. Mr. Buttrick was attending camp with Company G, 19th Regiment Massachusetts State Guard, of which he is a member, and while drilling on the parade grounds stepped in a hole. He was thrown violently to the ground.

950 PATIENTS EXCITED BY FIRE IN HOSPITAL

New York, Aug. 24.—Nurses and nuns for a time had difficulty in quieting 950 patients at St. Mary's Hospital in Brooklyn today, when a slight fire broke out in the supply building. No one was injured. More than 250 convalescent sailors in another building of the hospital slept peacefully through the excitement.

'RODY' IS GOING INTO Y. M. C. A. WAR SERVICE

Billy Sunday's Famous Chorister Will Brighten the Corner for Boys in France

Homer A Rodeheaver, Billy Sunday's song leader, familiarly known to thousands of Bostonians and to hundreds of thousands of men, women and children throughout the country as "Dody," is one of the latest recruits to enlist in the Y. M. C. A. for war service in France.

The famous chorister and his magic trombone, whose silver notes helped to lead thousands of sinners to "hit the sawdust trail," will now be heard by thousands of our soldier boys at the Y. M. C. A. huts in France. Once again the boys "over there" will be thrilled again by the notes of "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," and other popular hymns and patriotic national songs, sung and played as only "Rody" knows how.

Next to Billy himself, "Rody" is the most popular members on Sunday's staff. Just how the revivalist will be able to conduct his campaigns against sin without "Rody" is a question.

Sunday is about ready to open in Providence. How much "Rody's" absence will affect the spirit of the meeting is a matter of conjecture.

Ever since the beginning of the war "Rody" has been reported as getting more "restless," and he has repeatedly felt the impulse to get into active service. Now, it is said, he has determined definitely to sail for France. Early in April of this year it was reported that he had made arrangements to enter the service as an ambulance driver.

"Rody" served in the Spanish-American War and now feels the call of the greater struggle.

PUBLIC SERVICE IMPROVEMENT UNDER BAN

Get Along Best Way Possible to Win War, Says Chairman Hamlin

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 24.—War needs will hereafter serve to bar local public improvements and building operations, according to Charles S. Hamlin, chairman of the capital issues committee.

In a letter to all chairmen of public service commissions today, Mr. Hamlin said:

"It is plain that we must avoid every unnecessary use of capital, involving also the use of labor and materials, in order not to interfere with the financial and industrial requirements of the government in this paramount task of making war.

"Existing facilities must be made to serve in place of new ones, regardless of temporary inconvenience and discomfort, unless the public health or paramount local economic necessity is involved.

"These considerations, apply with marked force to the public utility situation.

"The extensions and betterments which public service corporations are accustomed to make in normal times, either on the initiative of their own enterprise or by direction of the regulating commissions under which they operate, should be postponed till after the war."

PARSON FINDS HAPPINESS IN LIFE OF SAILOR

Rev. Paul Plunkett Boggs, twenty-six-year-old South Carolina minister, working as "rookie" sailor on board the training ship Governor Cobb.

The Rev. Paul Plunkett Boggs, a twenty-six-year-old South Carolina minister, is working as a "rookie" sailor on board the training ship Governor Cobb, in Boston harbor. He finds the sailor's life the life to lead. He says he has found the key to success and happiness by scrubbing decks and polishing brass.

A reporter for the Merchant Mariner, published weekly by the United States Shipping Board recruiting service, found him on the hurricane deck of the Cobb, a pail of suds in one hand and a mop in the other.

The parson acknowledged frankly that he had learned and unlearned more in the past month than he ever thought it was possible. He is a tall man, well shaven and sleek.

STUDIES HUMAN NATURE.

"I thought I knew human nature while I was preaching patriotic sermons down in Greenwood," said the young minister, "but I have just woke up to what real living is. I have watched hundreds of boys come into this service and settle down to the new order of things almost without batting an eyelash; this uncomplaining spirit is genuine sacrifice, and it shows that it is real men that are enrolling here to crush the Kaiser. I like to study them."

"You seem to be in pretty good physical trim," suggested the reporter.

"Yes," replied the minister. "A fellow to grapple vigorously with his life problems has to keep himself in condition to do his best. I try to do just that and it works out pretty well. It did in the ministry and I know it will here."

"The life of an apprentice," he ventured, "is full of diversified tasks, none so irksome as to become dull. While I was on the Meade there were as many as 1,000 men on board at one time, and I was given plenty of opportunity to become acquainted with them, and I want to assure you that I made many friends."

GETS FIRST REAL THRILL.

Rev. Mr. Boggs says he got his first real thrill out of his work when he was transferred from the Meade to the Cobb.

"This was the greatest day I had experienced in the service," he said, "because it meant that soon I would go to sea. Right here I want to say that we have no pessimists in this service; all the boys are optimistic over the outlook, although, of course, some grow very pessimistic on their first trip out to sea—and who can blame them when they think ALL'S UP with them? It's enough to cause any one to grow blue. Fortunately, however, this feeling passes away soon."

Mr. Boggs graduated from the Presbyterian College of South Carolina last year, and it was while studying there and preaching in Greenwood that he was seized with the spirit of sacrifice and service that he had been urging upon others. After discussing the matter with his wife, he decided the naval branch of the service was best suited to him.

'MOVIES' RATED ESSENTIAL BY WAR BOARD

Industry Will Be Granted Priorities Necessary to Enable It to Operate

Washington, Aug. 24.—Representatives of the motion picture industry, including all its branches from the manufacture of the film to its projection on the screen, were told by the priorities committee of the War Industries Board that it had reached a tentative decision that the industry was an essential one.

The action was based on the "activities of the industry in connection with the several agencies of the government, the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus and other organizations engaged in war work, and also to the extent of its activities in supplying an educational medium and in furnishing to the great masses of the people a wholesome and comparatively cheap means of recreation."

LIMITATIONS IN INDUSTRY.

Certain limitations were placed on the operation of the industry.

1—Each member of the industry will pledge himself to discontinue all non-essential production and eliminate all wasteful methods. Old films must be scraped and reclaimed and returned for use in the manufacture of new films. Only wholesome pictures are to be produced. To save chemicals used in the production of explosives only one negativa of a single picture will be made, unless it is for export also, when two will be permitted.

2—Permits for the erection of new theatre buildings and equipment for new theatres will be denied during the war. Where localities are over-theatred no new theatres will be permitted to replace those retiring from business.

ENCOURAGE REPAIRING.

3—Manufacturers will encourage the repair of existing machines rather than the purchase of new. Manufacture of new iron and tin containers for films will be discontinued and substitutes used to conserve the metals.

When the regulations and others to be announced later are observed, the members of the industry will be granted the priorities necessary to enable them to operate.

FRANCE GRATEFUL TO YANKEE WOMEN

Washington, Aug. 24.—"The thanks and gratitude of France" were given to American war workers in a message from Premier Clemenceau to Y. W. C. A. representatives at the inter-allied woman's mass meeting in Paris, according to cables to the Y. W. C. A. war work council here today. Clemenceau, unable to speak to the women attending the conference, sent his secretary, who delivered the message to the women of America.

THEATRES

"AMERICA'S ANSWER"

Beginning with the Sunday evening performance tomorrow night at the Majestic Theatre, "America's Answer," the second in the series of official United states government films, presented by the Committee on Public Information, George Creel, chairman, will be seen for the third and last week in this city. At just this time when every avenue of industrial and mercantile activity is being utilized both in this country and across the Atlantic, to sustain and stimulate the boys "over there," it seems but reasonable to suppose that those "over here" are specially anxious to see what the chaps on the other side are doing.

LANCASTER THEATRE

A brace of excellent photoplay bills is announced for the week at the Lancaster Theatre, the programs suggesting the variety which constitutes pleasurable programs. For the first half there will be shown the screening of Charles Klein's famous drama, "The Guilty Man," played by an all star cast, the plot concerning a girl who because of her father's guilt suffers from the heritage of temperament, and when she is brought to the bar for a crime, the guilty one is proved to be her parent. The other photoplay is "Naughty Naughty," picturing Enid Bennett in a comedy role.

PARAGON PARK

Today and tomorrow will be gala days at Paragon Park and its famous Palm Garden. As usual, special features will mark these days when larger crowds than on any other days of the week throng this popular resort and expect to be entertained every moment without interruption, whether it be band concerts, watching the free open air circus acts, the cabaret in the Palm Garden, the Hall of Stunts, Hilarity Hall Circle Swing, merry-go-round, etc., dance hall or any of the thousand and one different amusements which help to make a visit to Paragon memorable.

Let Cuticura Be Your Beauty Doctor
All druggists: Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. X, Boston."

PARK THEATRE

Two strikingly attractive pictures will be shown next week at the Park Theatre. Viola Dana in "Flower of the Dusk," and Bryant Washburn in "The Ghost of the Rancho." The first picture shows the beautiful love of a young girl for her blind father whose flower of the dusk she is. It is a heart compelling drama from the pen of Myrtle Reed.

The Washburn picture deals with the adventures of a gilded youth from New York, whose disgusted parent sends him West to reform. How he falls in love, learns the way of the range and becomes a credit instead of liability make a very enthralling yarn. A sunshine comedy, the Pathe Weekly and other features complete the bill. Sunday night Olive Tell in "The Beautiful Adventure," and Mildred Mannering in "The Marriage Speculation."

FENWAY THEATRE

Charlie Chaplin make his appearance at the Fenway Theatre on the first three days of the coming week in "Triple Trouble," as Chaplin's troubles are always funny, "Triple Trouble" is said to be three times as funny as any of his previous productions. On the same program Gladys Leslie appears in "Wild Primrose," a tale of absorbing heart interest and effective comedy which make this an extremely entertaining production. The Allied War Review of this week shows British "Tommies" on duty in the shell-scared trenches in France.

GAYETY THEATRE

Today burlesque is catering to a vast number of people, both men and women, who demand the best in theatricals. In this connection may be mentioned one of burlesque's most noted producing firms, Jacobs & Jermon, who next week present at the Gayety Theatre their third edition of The Sporting Widows, the entire production this year being new, all of the dialogue, every song, and each costume being especially written and designed for this company alone, which will insure a performance that is bound to please the most exact audience.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Most musical burlesque organizations are content to possess and to advertise one comedian, but the "Great Star and Garter" show, playing next week at Waldron's Casino, boasts of five fun makers and each in the stellar class. They are Don Clark, Charles Burns, Will Bovis, Ray Read and Bert Hall.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

A quartette of high calibre vaudeville acts will be presented at the Codman Square Theatre the first half of the week, and the programme will be headed by Barney Gilmore and company in the hilarious comedy skit, "An Irish Honeymoon." This is said to preserve the best qualities of a class of entertainment that in these days is all too rare. Others on the bill will be Private Louis Hart and his company in an athletic scene, "A Dream;" Eddie Healey, the Irish minstrel, and Ross and White, in comedy and songs.

GLOBE THEATRE

Three stars of the screen are again featured on the bill at Loew's Globe Theatre, the program remaining unchanged throughout the week. Clara Kimball Young will be shown in her latest photoplay, "The Savage Woman," in which she appears in a romantic story with locale in Africa and England. It is a screening of a famous French story of intense romantic plot.

BOSTON THEATRE

Catherine Calvert one of the most winsome actresses in the movies will be the star in "Out of the Night," which will lead the movie bill at the Boston Theatre next week.

With this great picture there is the vaudeville bill. It is an exceptionally good one. J. C. Mack and Company will present one of the most up-to-date singing, dancing and talking acts; Dunton and Hackett will offer one of the seasons latest one-act musical comedies.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Two big bills of photoplays are announced for the Columbia Theatre through the week. During the first half there will be shown Maciste, the Marvelous, in his photoplay production, "The Warrior." This is said to be one of the most sensational of photoplays showing the modern Hercules, who had an untimely death in the present war, performing prodigous feats of strength as the hero of a stirring story of the war.

SOME NIGHT AND WAR DRAMA MONDAY

There is unusual interest among the theatrical profession in the first metropolitan production of "Some Night," which occurs at the Tremont next Monday evening, because the producer is Joseph Klaw, son of the senior partner of the famous producing firm of Klaw & Erlanger. Can a second generation of Klaws break into the game and do as well as the first?

Dad is helping his boy Joe all he can. He has sent over James Jay Brady, the veteran publicity promoter and one of the stars of the K. and E. staff, and loaned Julian Mitchell, the celebrated stage manager of the firm.

Harry Dell, the dancing comedian, is the author of the book, lyrics and music of "Some Night," and if you wonder whether a dancer could turn out anything worth while, step up and meet George Cohan, who does it regularly.

No information regarding the plot of "Some Night" has been permitted to ooze out, but we know that its scene is laid in Long Island, that it abounds in pretty girls, of whom samples can be seen elsewhere on this page, and it boasts a strong cast, which includes Forest Winant, Jimmie Marlowe and Roma June.

Weber Can Wait.

Only two months ago it was formally announced that Joe Weber and Lew Fields, whose stage partnership has furnished one of the most hilarious chapters in the history of American theatres, were to star together again in one of their characteristic merry-go-round shows. And that announcement, made in good faith, would undoubtedly have held true if the laughable Lew had not been persuaded to see a performance of "Friendly Enemies," given by the company headed by Sam Bernard and Louis Mann.

Before the performance was over Fields was so captivated with the play, so enthusiastic over its humor and pathos and patriotic possibilities, that he almost begged Mr. Woods for an opportunity to appear in it. From that moment the Weber-Fields reunion plan was shelved. "It can wait," said Fields. "You don't get a play like 'Friendly Enemies' once in a decade. Joe and I can well remain parted for a while yet, you bet."

Then Woods solved the difficult problem of finding a worthy associate for Fields by engaging Charles Winninger, of Cohan Revue fame, who for years has ranked among the foremost comedians on the American stage, and who is to be featured in the "Friendly Enemies" production to be seen at the Plymouth Monday.

The Clean Comedy.

If a play continues a vehicle of popular entertainment throughout the vicissitudes and changing modes of ten years, it is an indication that it contains some particular elements that enable it to make a wide appeal to a vast number of people. An example of this type of comedy is "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," in which May Robson appeared for so many seasons. Her present starring vehicle, "A Little Bit Old Fashioned," which opens the Hollis next Saturday night, promises to be of the same class. Such comedies, in the majority of cases, live for the simple reason that they reach the hearts of the people, that great mass of individuals whose approval and patronage make the success of such plays an assured fact.

The greatest number of the most successful comedies of modern times are homely plays. They deal with the sort of subject and kind of people that enter into our daily lives. They are not moulded upon a French farce, neither do they offer some unclean aspect of life and dilate upon it.

It has been noted in the final analysis, the comedy that tells a clean story is the one that wins out on a subject understood and appreciated by the man in the street.

Work for Oscar in 1920.

Dainty little Vivienne Segal, who took Boston by storm two years ago as the prima donna of "The Blue Paradise," in the leading feminine role of "Oh, Lady! Lady!" at the Wilbur Theatre, has a much more captivating part. It will be remembered that Miss Segal's last visit here was in her maiden part, and that she had improved in dancing, singing and acting was most apparent.

Miss Segal was born Philadelphia twenty years ago. She was graduated from the public schools there, was sent to the Convent of Mercy for finishing. At the age of fifteen, while a student in the convent Miss Segal joined the Philadelphia Operatic Society. Her ambition was to sing in the chorus, but as she was too young for that end of the society they placed her in the ballet and that accounts for her artistic dancing in "Oh, Lady! Lady!" where she shares honors with Carl Randall, who is considered the best male dancer on the stage today.

At the age of sixteen Miss Segal sang the role of Carmen at the annual performance of the Philadelphia Operatic Society and a brilliant future was predicted by the critics of that city. Later Vivienne sang Seibel in "Faust" with the same organization and at the present time has seven complete operas in her repertoire. She is the first singer engaged by Oscar Hammerstein for his grand opera company which is to open in 1920.

Who Said 10,000?

There isn't a more versatile person on the stage than Maud Odell, who plays Black Walnut Lizzie in "Maytime." If you doubt it peruse the list of her achievements in the last twenty years or thereabouts.

In the halcyon days of the Castle Square Stock Miss Odell was leading woman for eighty-three weeks and played all the parts there were at that time. She created the role of Antoinette de Mauban in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and played 400 times with James K. Hackett.

Straight from the legitimate she went to musical comedy and created the part of Queen Lil to Raymond Hitchcock's King Dodo. Since then she has been frequently seen in musical comedy, her last role being in "Nobody Home," which played the Wilbur three seasons ago.

The movies have also had their fling with Miss Odell, who was a member of the Famous Players company for several seasons.

And it is not so long ago since she won a prize of $10,000 as the most beautiful woman on the stage. She is still much better looking than her character mileups ever give her credit for being.

Actors Hard to Scare.

When you sit in the theatre watching a play you are apt to be so interested in the piece that you do not pay much attention to your fellow spectators. You may remember that you gave a horse laugh every now and then and that you heard laughing around you which didn't bother you except once or twice when you missed a line from the stage because of it.

The other afternoon I ventured behind the scenes at "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," during the second act when the action is at its wildest.

Do you know that the behavior of that audience was positively outrageous? From the stage you get the whole force of a bellow of laughter from a thousand throats. It's a wonder that it doesn't scare the actors off the stage, and how they keep cool and continue their roles in the face of the noise from the front is miraculous.

Florence Moore says that the cries of the spectators inspire her. "I don't go on the stage thinking of how I can be funny. I get out there and the audience sort of intoxicates me so that I am cutting up like a two-year-old without the slightest knowledge of what I am doing and why."

Wonderful Experience.

"Experience," the morality play which ran for a very long time in Boston two seasons ago, comes back for a brief engagement at the Majestic Theatre Labor Day. The success of this curious drama has been simply stupendous all over the country. In many places morning, afternoon and evening shows were given to satisfy the crowds who wished to see it. The troupe which comes back to Boston contains as many members of the original cast as could survive such a strenuous existence, and Charles McClintock, the high-brow press agent who now travels in advance of "Experience," gives hostages that the piece hasn't suffered by the changes.

Ritchie a Hired Man Again.

As might have been surmised, Raymond Hitchcock didn't last longer than one season as a manager. Despite extraordinary support on the road for the first version of "Hitchy-Koo" it barely paid expenses because Raymond would go up to an actor and say:

"How much will you take to work for me?"

And believed him. The regular managers would say: "How much? Here's half that. Sign on this line." And they usually did.

Anyway, the second edition of "Hitchy-Koo," which New York reviewers declare is even cleverer than the first, went on the rocks because Leon Errol and Hitchie got into difficulties artistic and financial. The latter closed soon after it opened, despite big business. Whereupon Kane and E. and Dillingham and Ziegfeld got together, bought the show, hired Hitchie, excused Leon, and are sending it to Boston to open the Colonial Labor Day.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

A. H. Woods has again demonstrated his ability at feeling the pulse of the public in his successful play "Friendly Enemies," which he will present tomorrow evening as the opening attraction of the Plymouth season with Lew Fields and a special Boston company, including Charles Winninger, favorably remembered with the last Cohan Revue. Boston is the third city to have a company for an indefinite engagement.

"Friendly Enemies," which is classified as a comedy drama, was written by Sam Shipman and Aaron Hoffman. The story is of two beloved old quarrelling friends who have made fortunes in America and brought up their families in New York. Both are sturdy types. Constant quarrels are going on since the war between United States and Germany has been declared. The obstinate old German stubbornly holds his own against the fine arguments of his more loyal companion, until, innocently mixing himself up with the Kaiser's spy system, he finds his own son has secretly enlisted and been reported drowned in a transport disaster, which has been financed by his own father's check. Then suddenly he turns into a wider channel of thought, is aroused to certain knowledge of the depredations of the marauding Boches, runs to earth the chief spy in Germany's service, and is rewarded by the coming home of the boy who was rescued from the wreck of the transport.

TREMONT THEATRE

"Some Night," a new comedy with music, will have its metropolitan premiere and usher in the regular dramatic season of the Tremont Theatre Monday evening. Joseph Klaw is the producer, and the book, lyrics and music are by Harry Dell, well remembered as a prominent figure in musical comedy, and last seen here in "The Rainbow Girl." With new musical productions much of its worth may be judged by those responsible for staging them, and in this case the practiced and expert hand of Julian Mitchell has been enlisted in co-operation with W. H. Post.

No hint of the story is given, the producer believing that it is better for the pleasure of the first night audience that full surprise of plot be preserved. But it is announced as a cheery admixture of sentiment and comedy with musical numbers plausibly introduced. There are three acts, the locale being a country home on Long Island, and its personages are the Summer dwellers therein.

The company comprises many notables in the realm of music and comedy. Among the leading members are Forrest Winant, Roma June, Louis Simon, James C. Marlowe, Grace Edmond, Camilla Crume, Charles Walsh-Homer, Thomas H. Walsh and Charles W. Meyer.

The engagement is a limited one, and the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees, together with an extra matinee on Labor Day, will be given.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

May Robson in "A Little Bit Old Fashioned" will usher in the new season at the Hollis Street Theatre, where she will be presented by Augustus Pitou for a limited engagement beginning Saturday, August 31.

"A Little Bit Old Fashioned," a melodramatic farce by Anna Nichols, is a play that is full of human nature, visualized by characters that have been drawn by a deft hand.

In brief, it is the story of a wife, who, in her devotion to home, has neglected the trifles of life for its larger issues, thereby losing her husband's interest. Though long having been considered old-fashioned and for this reason kept in the background of her husband's life, in his time of need her unerring instinct leads her straight to the heart of his dilemma. Her manner of regaining his regard by achieving the successful culmination of a deal that had eluded his best efforts, leaves nothing to be desired in the way of fun or sentiment.

The attraction comes direct from a long run in Chicago, and the same cast that assisted Miss Robson in that city will be seen here. It includes Burr Caruth, Edith Sonrad, Peggy Cameron, Howard L. Smith, G. A. Wimers, Jessma Shattuck, Lillian Harmer, J. A. Klernen and Henry Lester.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

An all-star bill of vaudeville will be presented through the first half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Many of the acts are of the quality that are capable of leading any program. Special mention is deserved by the Exposition Jubilee Four, a quartet of colored singers. Other acts are Sam Howard & Company in the one-act comedy drama, "The Prediction," the story of which is said to be of unusual tenseness; Rosamond and Dorothy, in musical and vocal specialties; Samsone and De Lila, sensational athletes, and Albert and Rogers, in dances.

On the screen there will be shown the latest news and war pictures, Mack Sennett's latest comedy, and the photoplay, "Will I Come Back to You," a Cecil H. De Mille production, enlisting an all-star cast of screen players, headed by Bryant Washburn and Florence Vidor. The story is of the war, beginning in Belgium prior to the invasion, and it takes its hero and heroine through a dramatic series of adventures.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Trixie Friganza, the great American comedienne, and Wilton Lackaye, one of the foremost character actors on the American stage, will appear as co-headliners at Keith's Theatre next week.

Miss Friganza, who has just left musical comedy for vaudeville, will appear in a new offering, "Champs."

Wilton Lackaye will also appear in a short skit which shows him at his best. The act is entitled "Quits," and was written by Hall McAllister. Mr. Lackaye will be assisted by a company of three.

With these two stars of the vaudeville stage there are also other acts up to the usual Keith standard. Harry Hines, formerly of Hines and Fox, will present "The 18th Variety."

A "Study in Sculpture" will be given for the first time here by one of the cleverest trapeze acts in the world. Stephens and Hollister, two funmakers, will offer "Out in California," Morley and McCarthy Sisters are the Girls of Personality; Moran and Wiser are comedy boomerangs.

BEACON THEATRE

Three stars will be on the bill at the Beacon Theatre in their photoplay productions which are shown for the first times in Boston, the program remaining unchanged throughout the week. Charlie Chaplin will be shown in "Triple Trouble," a new series of adventures showing the comedian encouraging a frying pan to fire existance until his methods of meeting tribulation lead him to smoother paths, affording hilarious amusement along the way. Pauline Frederick will enact the leading role of a screening of "Fedora," the accredited masterpiece of Victorien Sardou who wrote the play for Sarah Bernhardt, which remained her favorite for many years.

MODERN THEATRE

An enlarged photoplay bill of first run features is announced for the entire week at the Modern Theatre, three stars heading their respectively productions which have their initial Boston showings. Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Triple Trouble," which is announced as a new series of adventures for laughing purposes, and with his ability to amuse while enduring full variety of trouble, there is much reason for expectancy of pleasure. Pauline Frederick will be shown in "Fedora," a screening of the famous Sardou play which was the favored of Sarah Bernhardt's repertoire.

COMING EVENTS

At the Tremont Theatre on Monday night, September 16, Leo Ditrichstein will make his metropolitan debut in his new play, "The Matinee Hero." This story of the stage, its people manners and customs, was written by Mr. Ditrichstein and A. E. Thomas, and is said to afford this exquisite artist greater opportunities to reveal his histrionic endowment than anything that he has heretofore essayed.

GETTING 'EM OVER SHOWN IN FILM

A clear idea of how America is handling the tremendous job of transporting soldiers and supplies across the ocean may be gathered from the Second United States Official War Picture, "America's Answer," at the Majestic.

The picture shows the transport loading on this side and unloading in France, making use of the splendid port facilities constructed by the American engineers. On the new piers may be seen thousands of barrels, crates, boxes and cases of supplies for the army, recently transported and awaiting movement to the front. Hundreds of motor trucks and great piles of oil and gas supplies occupy vast space on the American piers. For the construction of five new refrigeration plants 11,200 tons of materials were shipped and successfully landed.

Making Atmosphere.

Certain scenes of Enid Bennett's latest photoplay, "The Marriage Ring," which will be given its first Boston showings the last half of next week at the Orpheum Theatre, gave the director a large order indeed. Some of the scenes are laid in Hawaii, and as it was not feasible to transport the company the thousand miles that separated the studio from that exotic land of splendor, it was the director's effort to simulate the atmosphere of the island in the picturing of the scenes.

Whoever has been in Hawaii and felt the charming spell of the tropic days and nights, the languorous beauty of its heavy perfumes, the dulcet sweetness of the native music of ukulele and guitar, who has seen the warm-skinned maidens dance the Hula, eaten poi with the fingers, or watched the end of the world in miniature in the volcano of Kilauea, realised that a more than simple suggestion is needed in order to bring back to vibrant recollection these sensations. Yet that is what has been said to have been accomplished by the director of this picture.

"Fedora" Filmed.

When Sarah Bernhardt, lovingly termed "the divine," visited a world tour and returned to Paris in 1882, she received the announcement that Victorien Sardou had written a French playwright and acknowledged the master melo-dramatist of the world. This play was "Fedora," and in it the dramatist played upon human emotions as an accomplished harpist manipulates the strings of his instrument in a composition that calls for the striking of every chord. The play remained throughout the major portion of the actress's career her favorite as well as the preferred of her admirers, and it was played in English version in this country by the well known Fanny Davenport. And now it has been translated to the screen with the beautiful and gifted Pauline Frederick in the title role, and it will be given its first Boston showings throughout the coming week at the Modern Theatre.

Telling Fortunes.

There are few girls in the world who are not thrilled as well as interested by forces telling a story accompanied by the mystifying embellishments. And none is more interested than Mae Marsh, whose latest photoplay, "Marsh Mad," will be given its first Boston showings at the Beacon Theatre throughout all of next week.

Miss Marsh has had many experiences with queens of second sight, and she knows many of the methods employed, though she confesses to having often been mystified by prophecies they have made. When she was a child one of them told her that she would be famous some day, but would never be able to speak to the people responsible for her good fortune.

This troubled her for a long time, and it did not occur to her until years later when she became a screen star that the fortune teller spoke the truth. Now she knows what was meant. She does her work in silence. She never sees her audiences, therefore the sensitive little star can never thank them for making her famous.

ATTRACTIONS AT MANY HOUSES

"EXPERIENCE"

Inaugurating another season at the Majestic Theatre, with the special holiday performance on Labor Day, September 2, will be a return engagement of that most remarkable play "Experience," which William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock, and Morris Gest have continued to present so successfully for the past three years.

TREMONT TEMPLE

There is so much lack of realism in most photoplays due to the public desire for "stunts," that it is a relief to see a film which is simply a plain statement of facts. Such a film is "My Four Years in Germany," now playing at Tremont Temple.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Most people like an unconventional play once in a while—unconventional with regard to dramatic standards rather than as to the social amenities. They will get it in "The Brat," given by the Liberty Players this week at Norumbega Park.

NANTASKET

Cool breezes and an hour's sail down the harbor to the finest beach in New England, Nantasket, is a trip that everyone should take before the end of the Summer season. Eight splendid boats comprise the fleet of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company and they are reputed to be the best equipped excursion steamers in the country.

To Boston Theatre Goers

On August 28th, 1915, a play was presented in the city of Boston which broke all known records previously existing in this city.

That play was called "EXPERIENCE." It was written by George V. Hobart, it was presented by the firm of William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, and it was given for 150 consecutive performances in three different theatres in Boston, playing to more than 225,000 people to gross receipts that almost approximated $300,000.

During its engagement in Boston it was endorsed by more than eight hundred members of the clergy and was enthusiastically praised by every newspaper critic as one of the greatest moral plays and the finest entertainment ever presented in this city.

Now Boston is about to see this great play once more. It will be the last and the only opportunity that will be afforded theatregoers of Boston to witness the most wonderful play in America, "EXPERIENCE."

The original producion of "EXPERIENCE" with the same big cast that has appeared in this play for the past three years will be seen at the MAJESTIC THEATRE for three weeks only, beginning Monday matinee, September 2d. It will be presented at a scale of prices within the reach of all, with $1.50 charge for the best orchestra seats, with three hundred first floor seats at $1, at every performance, and with a bargain matinee Wednesday and Saturday, when the entire lower floor will be $1.00.

A Holiday Matinee will be given on Monday, September 2d, LABOR DAY.

Seats for all performances will go on sale at the box office of the MAJESTIC THEATRE on Tuesday next, August 27th.

Mail orders sent at once with check or postal or express money order, including war tax, will receive prompt attention and will command preference in location of seats.

Patrons are advised to get seats immediately as the enormous demand for "EXPERIENCE" indicates that the capacity of the MAJESTIC THEATRE will be taxed to its utmost limit to accommodate all who desire to see the most wonderful play in America.

REMEMBER, if you miss "EXPERIENCE" this time, you will never have a chance to see it again. Its extraordinary success has been such that other cities are clamoring for it and there is no possibility of presenting this play again in Boston.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Chicago's Cubs do not shine in comparison with either the Red Sox or Indians for the purpose of a World's Series, yet it is surprising to observe how close they come to rating up with outfields which, at first glance, almost any student of baseball would declare outclass them.

Either Fred Mitchell constructed a ball team more cunningly than we have given him credit for doing, or there is much unsuspected strength and adaptability lurking among the Cubs.

No one would, at first venture, compare any one of the Cub outer gardeners favorably with either Speaker or Hooper, who, by the way, are two of the greatest that ever covered an outer garden.

Yet, for the purpose of the series this fall, the Cub trio, men rated as mediocre and one as an almost passe veteran, figure close up to their rivals in spite of Ruth's dangerous driving power, which is largely reduced by hitting against Tyler and Vaughn.

TRIS AND BABE STOPPED.

The reason is that Speaker's strength in attack is largely reduced by the mere fact that if the Indians and Cubs play, he will bat practically all the time against two corking left-handed pitchers, each a pitcher of the style which troubles him most.

Speaker, of course, hits any kind of pitching, even the good left-handers, but some he cannot hit as well as others. Ruth, on the other hand, often is completely stopped by cunning left-handed pitching and, in spite of his tremendous driving power at bat and the extreme shortness of the right field at Chicago, he does not figure as nearly as dangerous against Tyler and Vaughn as might be suspected.

Besides which, we cannot figure Ruth in the outfield for the entire series. It probably will be the strategy of Barrow to pitch Ruth against one or the other and and to use him as an outfielder against righthanded pitching.

When we started this doping I certainly expected to find that Hooper would shine high in the figures. Hooper, I know, is one of the greatest outfielders, and probably the most consistent, that ever played the game.

WELL DESERVED SEND-OFF.

His figures, both on seasons' work and on comparative figures in world's series, have shown him to be the best of them all, possibly with one or two scattered exceptions, and over a period of years he ranks alone.

Yet the dope on the Cubs and Red Sox shows him only slightly the superior of Flack, who, while a corking young fellow, fast, clever at bat and almost the equal of Hooper as a thrower, cannot be classed the same.

This is detracting nothing from Flack, but merely giving Hooper what is coming to him. Yet this year Hooper shows much lower figures than he has ever done in dope on any World's Series since he has been playing—not that he has deteriorated, but because he loses on two counts.

First, because he is against pitching which naturally cuts his attacking average, and, again, because the shortness of the right field in Chicago detracts from his fielding ability.

TRICK RIGHT FIELD WALL.

The truth is that a short right field makes one man almost the equal of another, save when it comes to being familiar with the angles of the wall so as to judge the rebound quickly, and, in this respect, Flack will have a slight edge on his greater rival.

Strunk loses considerably, as do the other Red Sox outer gardeners, because the Cub pitchers have the kind of delivery which cuts off some of his swatting value.

I cannot figure that Mann or Paskert possibly can hit the world's series pitching anything like as hard as they have been rapping the National Leaguers this season.

Paskert gains points on greater speed and condition than he has shown in several seasons, and Mann is a dangerous driver at times and is entitled to increases because of his pinch hitting this year.

Yet, as a whole, the outfields as compared fall nearly a hundred points to the man lower than in any world's series in the last ten years.

Monday we will tackle the infielders, starting with the first-basemen, and I expect we will discover a greater difference between players on the infield than we have found among the outer guardians.

TILDEN VS. PELL IN FINALS AT MEADOW CLUB

New York, Aug. 24.—The tennis world was given something new to speculate on when R. Lindley Murray, California "meteor," went down to defeat in the semi-finals of the Meadow Club tourney, preliminary to the national singles championship battle at Forest Hills, L. I., which begin next Monday.

William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia, undefeated champion of the season, was the victor over the winner of last year's patriotic tournament. Theodore R. Pell, the former indoor champion and master-artist of the backhand stroke, also upset the dope by rather rudely handling Walter T. Hayes, Western champion, in the other half of the bracket.

The defeat of Ichiya Kumagae, Jap champion, was a surprise in Thursday's play, but was hardly as unexpected as the fall of Murray. With the Jap eliminated the Californian was expected to win the tournament without much difficulty. Tilden and Pell were to meet today in the final round.

Both of the semi-final matches were won comparatively easy. Pell outplayed Hayes all the way, taking the two sets, 6—3 and 7—5. Tilden smashed his way to victory over the Californian, 6—3, 6—3. Murray's lack of competitive practice showed plainly, and probably accounted for his defeat.

Murray and Pell, playing together in the semi-final round of the doubles, were defeated by Hayes and Burdick, 6-2, 7-5.

Tilden, playing with Vincent Richards, special boy star, vanquished Sergeant Harold Throckmorton and Walter Merrill Hall, 6-3, 6-4.

The Amherst Club team and Dorchester Indians, two of the red-hot members of the Boston Amateur League, were in a clash in a double-header on the Washington street grounds, Roslindale, this afternoon. Haigh and McDonald were the rival pitching selections for the opener. Playing time, 1:45 p. m.

MT. HOPE A. A. QUITS AS STARS DON KHAKI

The Mt. Hope A. A. nine of Roxbury, owing to three more of its stars entering the service, has disbanded. The team had its usual successful season under Manager Francis J. Drohan's guidance and he hopes to ring up with another winner next Spring. He has been forced to cancel the bookings with the Ghizzy Ghost Club team of Roxbury, and Shamrock of Lynn.

McKenzie to Oppose Russell

The speedy Winchester team was to play the Newton Upper Falls nine this afternoon. McKenzie and White and Russell and Morrison were the rival batteries.

CORBETT'S CORNER — BY JAMES J. CORBETT

Mike Donovan had some novel and exciting experiences during his thirty years as boxing instructor at the New York Athletic Club. Quite frequently pupils of his, nettled because an old man made them look like the worst dubs in the world, and angered because of the kidding of friends, decided "to give the old boy a good trouncing." But they never succeeded.

At 69 Mike Donovan was still able to turn back the most vicious attacks that were aimed at him; at 69 he was still a great athlete and a marvelous boxer.

Often during the years that he was an instructor, friends tried to slip something over on Mike by sending to him, in the guise of a pupil, some really first class fighter who had orders to "hand the old boy a walloping." But it couldn't be done.

Quite a few years ago a youth, about the size and bulk of Jim Jeffries when the great gladiator was in his prime, dropped into the gymnasium just as Donovan was about to complete his day's work, which had consisted of boxing nearly 50 rounds with a variety of pupils.

"I'd like to learn a little about boxing; wil you teach me?" he asked Donovan.

RINGER GOT A LACING.

"Sure," responded Mike, thinking the youthful giant was a member of the club. "When do you want to take your first lesson?"

"I'd like to start right now," responded the other.

Mike was tired—but Mike replied:

And about five minutes later the two men squared away for action, presenting a strange picture of contrast. There was the aged Mike, beaming only 155 or so, faced by a youth who was over six feet tall and weighed about 215.

For a minute or so the kid tried to act the part of a ring novice. But soon, in his eagerness to send over a haymaker to Mike's jaw, he exposed his purpose.

Realizing that a trap had been set for him, Mike at once doffed the mantle of a boxing teacher and became a fighter once again.

And what a whipping he handed out to that giant!

Fighting with all the coolness and skill that had made him a world champion, Mike showed so superior to his husky foe that it was no contest at all.

LET YOUNGSTER OFF EASY.

By bewildering shifts, Mike tricked the youngster into wild swings and every time Mike rewarded with a stiff jab to the face. After a time Mike shifted the attack to the stomach and ribs and soon he had the youngster groggy and bewildered.

Those who saw Donovan battling that day insist that had he cared to continue the fight another round or two he could have put his huge foe to sleep.

But that wasn't Mike's purpose. All he wanted to do was to teach the kid a lesson—a real lesson. And he had succeeded in less than four rounds.

So Mike grabbed the arms of the youngster in a fatherly sort of way, pulled him over toward the dressing room, and said:

"That's all for today's lesson, my boy. You've got the makings of a good fighter in you—but you have much to learn."

McGRAW ADMITS CUBS ARE CLASS OF LEAGUE

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The Cubs Claws Club presented Manager Johnny McGraw of the New York Giants with a massive floral horseshoe before the game on the North Side. In accepting the gift, he stated that he considered the Cubs the "class of the National League."

Loftus, Up Again, Is Given Ovation by Spa Race Goers

By ED CURLEY.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Though it was Johnny Loftus Day at the track, Sunny Slope, the favorite, won the Sagamore Handicap, with Fairy Wand second and Naturalist third.

The whole story is that Loftus returned to the saddle in this event, wearing the Widener silks on Naturalist. When he appeared on the track he received a reception as hearty and wholesome as if he had just won a classic.

Johnny only finished third, but would have won if Naturalist had not made a drive for the fence after making the first run. It looked from the stand as if Naturalist was going to break through the timber.

Loftus instantly straightened him out and set sail for the two leaders. It was too late and Naturalist only dropped into the third place.

Before the races Loftus held quite an impromptu reception in the paddock. He is undoubtedly the king of the riders and is extremely popular with the turf world. He was on the ground for two months due to his ride on War Cloud at Belmont, which his employer, A. K. Macomber, found fault with.

Loftus came right back in the fifth and brought Little Nearer home under a regular Loftus ride. He made Little Nearer step so fast that the colt ran the mile and five-sixteenths in 2:10 flat, clipping 3 2-5 seconds off the track record.

Pigeon Wing, of H. P. Whitney's string, amazed the crowd when she won the opening event, a five furlong dash, in :57 4-5. This nicked three-fifths of a second off the track record, made by Eternal, last week.

Polymelian, carrying the crushing burden of 140 pounds, did a little startling work on his own account by winning the second race and also equalling the track record of 1:10 2-5 for six furlongs.

Two Fast Pairs Hook Up in 40-Mile Clash at Revere Saucer

Two big special events, as well as the regular card of amateur and professional races make up the card at the Revere cycle track tonight.

Wiley and Linart are teamed up against Madonna and Corry in a forty-mile team race and this should prove a banner attraction.

Then, the semi-finals and finals for the New England sprint championships will be run off, and, as all the men who qualified are well known to the beach fans, some close racing is certain to result.

The motor-paced race gives the fans their last chance to see four of the big field in action before the International sweepstakes, carded for next Wednesday night.

JIMMY ARCHER WINDING UP CAREER WITH REDS

Cincinnati, Aug. 24.—Jimmy Archer, veteran catcher, who was recently released by Brooklyn, has been signed by the Cincinnati club. Archer started the season with Pittsburgh.

GIRARD PROVES HE'S LIVE WIRE IN C. A. C. RING

By RINGSIDE.

Tommy Shea of New Haven, Ct., received the decision over Joe Tynan of Philadelphia at the Commercial A. C. after ten rounds of slow and uninteresting boxing.

Not until the eighth round rolled around was there any signs of interesting work. In the eighth, ninth and tenth they warmed up a bit and did a little slugging.

Shea won because he aimed his punches a little bit straighter than Tynan and landed the cleaner blows. The members who had nowhere else to go stayed for the finish.

The real bout of the bill was the Al Gerard and Sammy Diamond number. Not for a minute did the little battlers slacken their pace, going like whirlwinds the entire distance of ten rounds.

Little Al proved a genuine surprise to the wise gents who had Diamond as good as "in" before the bout. Gerard used a stiff uppercut at close quarters, landing it repeatedly. Diamond was a little bearcat and kept boring in, but the North Ender made good use of his speed when closely pressed.

The tenth round was as fast as the nine previous ones, and, toward the close, Diamond got in a corker to Gerard's stomach. Al was in distress, but cleverly used his bean and evaded Diamond's rushes till the bell sounded.

Louis Strona of Newport, R. I., put a check to Joe Flynn's winning career, stopping the North End flash in the fifth round with a rasping blow to the stomach.

Joe had taken the count in the previous frame from a left hand smash to the jaw, and was on the floor from a punch in the wind when the bell sounded at the close of the round. The finish seemed close when they came up for the fifth and Strona waded in and planted it as already mentioned.

Bob Josephs showed his friends how hard he could punch Sammy White until Conley thought he had gone far enough and stopped it in the third round.

White subbed for Mike Castle of Lawrence.

OWENS AND SNYDER GO DISTANCE TO DEAD HEAT

Lowell, Aug. 24.—Paddy Owens of Cambridge and Barney Snyder of Roxbury, boxed twelve rapid rounds to a draw at the Crescent A. C. Owens excelled when at close quarters, but Snyder scored early and often with his left, which evened up things. Billy Woods of Manchester, N. H., got the decision over Dan McCormack of South Boston in the ten-round semi-final.

Charley Parker of Boston defeated Kid Francis of Lawrence in eight rounds, and Happy Conley of Lowell bested Jeff Gallant of Boston in five rounds.

GOSSIP IN GLOVELAND — By RINGSIDE

AS HARRY GREB, Pittsburgh middleweight, has canceled his booking with Tommy Robson at the Arena next Tuesday night, the Armory A. A. officials have been forced to book a new bill. Terry Brooks of the West End and Paul Doyle of New York will clash in the main event. Joe Rivers and the Jamaica Kid resume hostilities in an eight-round bout; Shaver O'Brien and Walter Butler do the honors in the semi-final, while Frank Toronto and Rob Josephs open the show in a six-rounder.

* * *

IF JOE FLYNN had hit with his fists closed when he was handing them good and swift to Louis Strona in the first couple of rounds, he would have fared better.

* * *

AL GERARD gave as classy an exhibition of ring generalship as any local product has shown for some time. When Diamond was crowding the little Italian, Al used little time in skipping out of danger. He managed to whip one or two over every time he was retreating, too.

* * *

TOMMY SHEA seems to have lost his "pep"; also his punch. Tynan and he stood flatfooted, led at the same time, and what punching they did was in the clinches.

BIG SHIPYARD LEAGUE IN COLLAPSE

Suspension of Pitcher Dan Griner Causes Row in Ranks

The Shipyard Baseball League of the New York district is going on the rocks. At least this would seem to be the case if recent developments are to be taken into account.

The keen rivalry which characterized the shipyard baseball competition at the outset has been transformed into discord, with charges and counter-charges being made by two factions.

The whole trouble centres about Dan Griner, the former Brooklyn National pitcher. Griner was accused using the emery ball against the Robbins and Newburgh team, and at the last meeting of the association was suspended from the league.

The officials of the Standard team have appealed the case to Ed Reulbach, president of the league.

Reulbach has sent the following letter to the clubs in the league:

"I believe this case should be reviewed and the player reinstated after August 25. The umpire will be instructed to watch Griner very carefully and expel him for the first illegal pitch."

Manager McLaughlin, of the Morse team, which is leading the league, said last night:

"I can see no reason why the case should be reopened. We will not acquiesce in the plan to reconsider the suspension."

POP GEERS IS THROWN BUT UNHURT, LUCKILY

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Lu Princeton won the free-for-all trotting purse on the Grand Circuit card, taking two of the three heats from St. Frisco, the only other starter.

In the 2:08 trot Pop Geers, driving Kelly DeForest, was thrown when his horse fell going down the stretch. Fortunately there was no serious damage. Harry Fleming, behind Opera Express, swerved, and also was thrown, while W. H. Halsted, driving Belle Stamford, got in on the wreck.

David Guy sent in three straights in the 2:20 trot. Baron Wood won the only pacing event, the 2:11 class, making it two out of three.

NORTHROP AND TERRY DO HONORS FOR BRAVES

Cincinnati, Aug. 24. — The Braves arrived here from Pittsburgh this morning to pay a three-day visit on Christie Mathewson's Reds, who have come to life in great shape and hope to overhaul the Pirates before the curtain descends, Labor Day. Jake Northrop, former Indianapolis pitcher, bagged the final matinee in Pittsburgh, 5-0. He yielded but three hits and was never in any danger.

The Pirates sent out fifteen spirals to the Boston outfielders and the majority of them were puny pops. Leach, who opened the fourth inning with a double, was the only Pittsburgh player getting as far as the second cushion. Terry's hitting clinched the decision for Northrop. Incidentally, the rookie shortstop registered three runs.

LEVINSKY AND TURNER MINGLE MONDAY NIGHT

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 24.—Battling Levinsky, generally acknowledged king of the light-heavyweights, and Clay Turner, Indian middleweight, will top Monday night's fistic bill at the Armory A. A. They will have it out over the eight-round route.

RAY CALDWELL JUMPS YANKEE NINE FOR GOOD

New York, Aug. 24.—Pitcher Ray Caldwell has again deserted the Yankees. He has gone to the Teitjen & Lang Dry Dock Company at Weehawken, where he played last Saturday and Sunday. Caldwell went to the Polo Grounds and took away his belongings.

It is understood that he has been provided with an essential job, in addition to which he will pitch for the baseball team of the dry dock concern.

SOCCER MEN ARRANGE CHALLENGE CUP DATES

The National Soccer Challenge Cup Committee of the United States Football Association has arranged dates for playing off the various rounds of the national challenge cups. The dates:

Preliminary round, on or before November 17; second round, on or before December 22; third round, on or before February 9; fourth round, on or before March 2; semi-finals, on or before March 30; final, on or before April 20.

NEW YORK LAYERS ARE STRONG FOR RED SOX

New York, Aug. 24.—The first world's series bets reported here have the Red Sox favorites to beat the Cubs. The odds are 6 to 5. The wagers so far have been comparatively small. It is figured by the smart ones that the series will be a close one and probably go six or seven games.

WORLD'S SERIES SANCTIONED BY SEC. BAKER

He Puts His O. K. on Next Month's Classic — Players' Time Extended to Sept. 15

Washington, Aug. 24.—Secretary of War Baker has officially sanctioned the playing of the World's Series next month.

He announced that he would write to Provost Marshal-General Crowder to that effect, suggesting that draft exemption be extended for the members of the two competing teams.

Secretary Baker's action was taken as a result of a letter from the National Baseball Commission asking him for his formal recommendation that the series be played so they could go before the local draft boards concerned and ask for individual extensions of exemption of men likely to be withdrawn by the draft.

In compliance with their request, however, Mr. Baker went further and decided to recommend the extensions himself, as well as lend his formal approval for the demand for the big games:

"The National Commission," said Secretary Baker, "asks me to give official sanction to the World's Series. My disposition is to do it. I will write to General Crowder and tell him that I would be glad to have the local draft boards informed I am in sympathy with an extension to September 15 for such persons as will be involved in the World's Series."

The Chicago Nationals have clinched the National League pennant. The Red Sox, three full games ahead of the second place Cleveland Americans, are a full step nearer their goal today.

Figuring Boston as the American League winner, it is a practical certainty that the series will open in Boston, September 4.

The usual customs will not be followed this year regarding the schedule of games, according to baseball men here. The commission hopes to arrange the schedule so that one trip and two at the most between Boston and Chicago will suffice.

It is likely that three games will be scheduled for Boston and three for the Windy City.

St. Louis Browns Make Final Stand Against the Barrow Boys Today

By NICK FLATLEY.

Samuel Jones, according to his very pleasing habit along that line, kept the Red Sox on the victory path again and thereby brought them just a little nearer to that pennant, which seems so hard to clinch. The Indians won also.

The Sox pulled the game out in the ultimate part of the ninth, when Strunk broke up a tie by scooting home when Hank Severeid made a wild chuck to try to catch him stealing third. The count at that time was five all. Victory Samuel having been shaky at times, but getting away through fine support. The tally was 6-5.

Wright started for the hostiles, but went away from there in the fourth, and Byron Houck took his place and incidentally the defeat. All in all it wasn't a wildly exciting pastime, the earnest desire of the Barrow brigade to win being the enlivening feature.

The Browns were to make their farewell appearance this P. M. and will be stacked up against Mays or Ruth, either of whom should tack on one more win and make that flag so much the more certain.

The Fenway flock stacks up against the Tigers and Athletics next week, and then hikes to New York for the windup Labor Day.

GEN. TAYLOR CUP WON BY PAUL TEWKSBURY

Paul Tewksbury, playing in his best form, proved too classy and experienced an opponent for "Eddie" Lowery, Lieutenant Francis Ouimet's former caddie, in the final round in the Press Club golf tournament, at Wollaston, and secured permanent possession of the General Charles H. Taylor trophy. The score was 4 and 3.

Phil J. Barry, Newton High School, won the open handicap medal play of eighteen holes from a field of thirty players. He was out in 43 and in in 35. A. N. Wakefield, Wollaston, got the best net, 91-17-74.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG WEDDED LIFE

Betty Bryce Intimates to the Bride That There's a Mystery About Jim, but Doesn't Tell What It Is

By Ann Lisle

CHAPTER VI.

(Copyright, 1918, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

AM I going to like Betty Bryce? I thought at first I must hate her. Then I decided just to forget her—to put her out of my life. It seems, however, Betty Bryce doesn't intend to let me do that!

This morning when we took a little spin in our car, Jim discovered that the carburetor was clogged by "dirty gas." He decided to give the car a thorough overhauling before we started out this afternoon for a trip to the nearby flying field. He hurried down to the garage and I put on my little blue motor hat and sat on the piazza waiting for him.

Suddenly Betty Bryce's pattie-ship-gray limousine drove up to the steps. She got out, followed by her little wavering companion, Miss Moss. At sight of me a sudden glint came into her green eyes. I could see that she was forming a decision, and I knew from my first experience with her how she swept people into the heart of her decisions.

In another minute—almost before I realized it—the limousine had been dismissed, Miss Moss waved into upstairs regions, and Mrs. Bryce and I were on our way to the little Vine-hung Summer house down near the fountain in the grounds.

"You and I have a great deal to say to each other," remarked Mrs. Bryce in a voice that seemed almost kind, even though it was very businesslike. "Is Jimmie out of the way somewhere?"

I told her that he had gone to fix the carburetor, and she smiled serenely."

"Oh, then we've an hour. When Jimmie starts tinkering with a car"—she waved one white hand in a graceful gesture, smiling in real amusement. Again I noticed the red scar across her knuckles. "Well, Mrs. Jimmie, you and I are going to be friends. You don't like me very well yet—but you will. People always do when I want them."

I choked back the words that fairly threatened to well up and say themselves: "Yes, I know—but why must you want my husband to like you? Why can't you let him alone? Instead I parried:

"Why shouldn't I like you?"

The Women Fence

"Well done, little girl—that puts me on the defensive! I knew you were clever. No, there isn't any reason why you shouldn't like me—unless you're the type of woman who is going to object to all her husband's old friends and want to start in all over new for her world. I wouldn't try that on with Jimmie if I were you. He has some good pals—and he's a loyal sort."

"He told me—about your husband," I said gently.

She smiled serenely—I think hers must be the ways thoroughbreds take their losses—and she said:

"Yes, Jack Harrison—he was with poor Atherton when my boy tumbled down behind his own lines in a flaming car. It was your Jimmie who wrote it to me—back in the Spring of nineteen-fifteen, when it wasn't even our war yet. I hurried across to get my boy—to see what I left it there, where he had fought so splendidly. Did Jimmie tell you that?"

"No—only that he was with your husband—at the last."

"Then I won't tell you any more, Mrs. Harrison. I think we'll let your hero tell you his own war story. He talks about the war to you all the time, of course."

"No—hardly ever," I replied.

Betty Bryce looked at me strangely, and then she exclaimed:

"Why, it was his life for over three years! Oh, forgive me, Mrs. Harrison. I suppose you keep him from doing it for fear it will hurt too much."

Suddenly I knew that this wasn't so. I had married Jim after a whirlwind courtship—married him without knowing him. I didn't even know him now. The war had been his life for over three years, and I was asking him to forget his very life and live in a lotus land of love.

One minute I loathed myself. The next I resented this strange woman, with her beautiful clothes, her assured manner, her compelling eyes and the little air of reserve and mystery that hung about her. She talked of everything fearless and without questioning whether or not she were intruding—she talked freely of everything but herself.

"Perhaps you mean to be kind," I said slowly, "but do you think you need to tell me what a wife and husband should talk about? Isn't it merciful to let Jim forget the war for a while?"

She Keeps Her Temper

It was abominable of me, but she didn't get angry. She only looked at me with an expression that seemed almost pitying.

"Mrs. Jimmie, there are some things you will need to understand if you're going to be happy with your husband. He was a soldier for three years. The war is in his blood. Let me tell you—"

She leaned forward earnestly. I felt almost frightened as she exclaimed:

"Whether Jim likes it or not, I'm going to tell you some of the things you need to understand. I have seen those boys—"

Then Jim's clear whistle rang over the lawn and I saw him whirling the little car about and driving down the road toward the Summer house. A sudden feeling of relief made me almost dizzy. I wanted to know—and yet I feared what Betty Bryce had been ready to say—the things Jim's voice stopped:

"I knew you girls would hit it off when you got to know each other. What have you been telling little Anne, Betty?"

Betty Bryce lifted her eyes to his with cool insolence.

"We've been talking about the things women usually talk about—men and things," she said lightly.

And never once on our trip did it occur to me to explain to Jim that he was not telling the truth—queer that there should be a secret between Betty Bryce and me.

My boy and I spent a wonderful afternoon at the great aviation field. We were happy together, but even in my wonder at the great planes which rose whirring above us, like giant birds, I couldn't forget the warning in Betty Bryce's eyes—in her tense voice. What was it she felt that I had such grave need of knowing?

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

He Is to Be Congratulated

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Before my brother sailed for France he became engaged to a girl he had known for years, she thinking he had a good deal of money. Some time ago I visited my brother's financee, and upon discussing him I told her he had no money at all. She immediately wrote to him and asked if what I said was true. I do not know what he answered, but don't you think it was wrong of her to write a letter which would depress him and make him unhappy? I should like to know what you think of this matter. SISTER.

FROM my point of view, your brother is to be most heartily congratulated, though, doubtless, he may not realize it in the first shock of disappointment. Such girls belong to the "meal-ticket" sisterhood and any man is well rid of them. But the process is not unlike the surgeon's scientific but somewhat knife for making the best incision. Such a woman is unworthy to be a soldier's wife.

She Is Uncertain

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For three years I have known a certain young man; we went to school together, and he used to go about considerably until we had a disagreement. He joined the navy, and while home on a furlough he chanced to meet me and we stopped and spoke. Since then we have been going about with him when he is at home. He seems anxious to renew our old friendship, and I do him all I can, but why he loves me or not is uncertain. Sometimes he acts devotedly and sometimes as though he did not care. He has written to me asking me to write to him. Do you think he is worth my affections, or do you think I should write to him. B. D.

IT would be all right for you to write to the young sailor if you care to. But, in spite of the fact that you claim to "love him dearly," you seem uncertain if the game would be worth the candle. This does not ring like true love to me. Doubtless both of you will have a great many friends before you settle down to a choice of a life partner.

A SERIAL OF EAST AND WEST

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

DURING the three miles before the pair in the automobile reached the spot designated Clifford had talked rapidly about himself and his business projects, his friends and his amusements—in short, about almost everything that he knew except the subject which just now was uppermost in his mind.

Butler listened, making only an occasional comment, determined not to question his companion, but to force him to introduce the "business matter" to which he had referred earlier in the evening.

At last, as they approached the junction of the four roads, Butler reminded the driver that his part of the trip was ended.

"I am going to get out now," he said, "and walk back home. So please stop right here."

"All right," Clifford assented, applying the brakes. "But first I have something to tell you."

"Hurry up, then," Butler suggested.

Clifford brought the car to a dead stop before he made his momentous announcement. His air of having something of great significance to impart irritated his companion.

"Well, what do you want to say?" Butler demanded, brusquely, turning so that he faced the man seated by him.

His manner was so portentious that Butler laughed aloud.

"Well, what of that?" he scoffed. "I am glad it is not her name. I think 'Lizzie Moore' is an ugly name, anyway."

He was not as indifferent as he sounded. He longed to ask who the girl was.

But he would not discuss her with this man. Instead, he started to get out of the car.

"If that's all you wanted to say you went to a great deal of trouble to say it," he commented carelessly. "I will say good-night now! And," with a calmness that infuriated the farmer's son, "I might add that it was hardly worth while to bring me all this distance to tell me such a trifle as that. Nevertheless, I will have a good walk back—and it will do me good!"

"Good-by! I hope you make your train without any trouble."

"Hold on!" Clifford burst forth. "You act as if it made no difference to you who that girl is, but it does! And I'll tell you why."

Butler had stepped from the car and now turned suddenly upon the speaker, who still sat at the steering wheel.

"Be careful what you tell me," he warned. "You may be laboring under a grave mistake."

Clifford was too enraged and chagrined to heed the anger that vibrated in the voice of the man whom he was hoping to shock.

"Mistake!" he jeered. "I guess I know what I'm talking about. Wade sent that girl here."

"Wade!"

The exclamation escaped Butler's lips without his volition. The statement had indeed surprised him to such an extent that he was off his guard. But only for an instant.

"Yes!" Clifford exulted. "That gets you, does it? I thought it would. Wade sent her here. He's keeping her—he's"—

"You d——— hound!"

Before the farmer's son knew what had happened, the slight young college man had seized him by the collar and was dragging him from the car.

Playmates

By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews

TIME was when you were comrade to the old,
Friend to the sorrowful, grown tired of breath;
Now all the buoyant hearts and heads of gold
Run to your arms, O Death!

Time was when you could terrify the bold,
When seasoned warriors shivered at your breath;
Now boys go singing down into the cold
Seas where you wait them, Death!

Time was when loss and grief and dust and mold
Were all the message of the parting breath;
Now youth and gladness of the world enrolled
Laugh through your veil, O Death!

Time was life seemed at end, the story told
When the dear clay was emptied of dear breath;
Now, sudden vision lights a wisdom old—
Life but begins with death.

O grave, how may your ancient victory hold
These bright, unconquered ones, careless of breath?
O playmate Death, whose hand they rush to fold,
Where is your sting, O Death?

Fresh Air and Health

DISCUSSED BY AN EXPERT

By Brice Belden, M. D.

MANY homes are simply breeding places, for disease, because of the failure to admit fresh air.

Tuberculosis in the majority of cases occurs in families occupying three rooms or under. More cases occur in two-roomed quarters than in three, and more in one-room homes than in two. The number of cases of tuberculosis and pneumonia increases in proportion to the number of overcrowded houses in any district or ward of a city.

Our greatest weapons against tuberculosis and pneumonia are fresh air and good housing. In fact, they are our best weapons against a host of diseases.

The Rockefeller Institute has made remarkable studies regarding the nature and management of pneumonia, but it remains essentially a problem in social reform, for social reform would not tolerate tenements and poverty.

People are in the habit of looking to officials and commissions and organizations for that which waits upon a fundamental change in the social order.

When Virchow, the great German physician, was sent by the government to investigate an epidemic, he reported that the community afflicted was suffering from economic and industrial exploitation and that the poor resisting powers of the people were due to social abuses which he fully discussed. This was a strange course to pursue in his day, but at the present time it is a commonplace, and the new attitude will yet produce results.

Poor people, in an attempt to prevent waste of fuel, make their living rooms in the Winter time as near air-tight as they can. Fresh air is shut out in order to obtain a comfortable temperature. Then most rooms in the poorer sections of the city contain only enough cubic air space for one person, although frequently used by several. People will gather in such rooms for the express purpose of producing a comfortable temperature through the heat of their bodies. In the Summer time, in many communities, people close their windows at night to prevent malaria, believing that night air is injurious.

When one considers that the air in a good sized living room ought to be changed every hour one can only be afflicted at the conditions frequently encountered in the homes of the people, the life-giving ether excluded or vitiated by the products of respiration and artificial illumination. Continued devitalization leads inevitably to disease.

DO YOU LIKE VEGETABLES?

If you are fond of vegetables now is the time to take advantage of the season, and to use them. Try these excellent recipes recommended by Good Housekeeping, the great authority on all matters having to do with the home.

SUCCOTASH

One quart of wax beans, three or four ears sweet corn, one cupful milk, two tablespoonfuls butter or margarin. Salt and pepper to taste.

Cut beans in one-inch pieces and cook in boiling water until tender. Watch carefully that all water is cooked out, when done. When beans are boiling, jay ears of corn on top. Cook ten or fifteen minutes, take out, cut from cob. When beans are tender, drain, add corn, milk, butter, salt and pepper. It is well to add salt to beans when they begin to be tender. Oversalting ruins this dish, however, as the sweet, delicious flavor from the cob is lost.

HOTCH-POTCH

Two quarts of well-seasoned stock or eight bouillon cubes and two quarts of boiling water, four white turnips, four medium-sized carrots, three or four young onions, few sprigs of parsley, one head lettuce, one medium-sized cauliflower, one quart peas shelled, one pint string beans.

Chop fine the turnips, carrots, onions, parsley and lettuce. Add the caring beans cut in small pieces and boil in the stock for an hour. Twenty minutes before they are done, put in the cauliflower, thoroughly washed and separated in small pieces, and the peas shelled. Add seasoning if needed.

The March of Science

"Mr. Dobson, how do you account for the fact that I have found a piece of rubber tire in one of the sausages I bought here last week?"

"My dear madam, that only goes to show that the motor car is replacing the horse everywhere!"

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

"The four-year-old daughter of a clergyman was ailing one night and was put to bed early. As her mother was about to leave her she called her back.

"'Mamma,' she said, 'I want to see papa.'

"'No, dear,' her mother replied, 'Papa is busy and must not be disturbed.'

"'But mamma,' the little girl declared solemnly, 'I am a sick woman, and I want to see my minister.'"

Roald Amundsen, the famous Norwegian explorer, has started upon another Polar expedition. He expects to be away three years, cruising in the Arctic Sea, which he is to chart; but, in case of emergencies, his ship itself is carrying provisions for seven years.

On one of his Arctic expeditions Amundsen lost several of his dogs, and, being unable to proceed, asked a native in his very best Eskimo to sell him one or two. To his surprise, the request was rather indignantly refused.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Amundsen. "I have often bought dogs."

The Eskimo looked his astonishment. Then, after a very wordy argument, the explorer suddenly discovered that all the time he had been using, not the Eskimo word for "dogs," but for children.

Stephen Leacock as a maker of laughter, holds a unique position. He has been compared with the immortal Lewis Carroll (who also wrote books, by the way, and always regretted that he was known chiefly as a maker of mirth), Mark Twain, W. W. Jacobs, Peter Finley Dunn, the creator of Mr. Dooley, and Artemus Ward. But it is generally accepted that, for sheer humor, he walks over the lot.

Not long ago an afternoon paper predicted a Leacock Club. Less probable things have come about.

A Thrilling Story of an American Girl and German Intrigue in This Country

"YOU call them suckers," she observed. "That's because they're always working, always studying, always experimenting. Supposing they got hold of something like this new explosive?"

"First of all," he told her, "I don't believe in it, and secondly, if it exists, the formula isn't in their hands."

"Supposing it is in mine?" she suggested. "I might sell it to them."

"I'd trust you all the time," he laughed light-heartedly. "I can't see you giving a leg up to the Germans . . . Will you lunch with me at 1 o'clock tomorrow, please?"

"Certainly not," she replied. "You must attend to your work, whatever it is."

"That's all very well," he grumbled, "but every one has an hour off for luncheon."

"People who win wars don't lunch," she declared severely. "Here's Jimmy—I can hear his voice—and he's brought some one with him. I'll—let you know about lunch."

The door opened. James Van Teyl and Fischer entered together.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE first few seconds after the entrance of the two men were monopolized by the greetings of Pamela with her brother. Fischer stood a little in the background, his eyes fixed upon Lutchester. His brain was used to emergencies, but he found himself here confronted by an unanswerable problem.

"Say, this is Mr. Lutchester, isn't it?" he inquired, holding out his hand.

"The same," Lutchester assented politely. "We met at Henry's some ten days ago, didn't we?"

"Mr. Lutchester has brought us a letter from Dicky Green," Pamela explained, as she withdrew from her brother's arms. "Quite unnecessary, as it happens, because I met him in London just before we sailed."

"Very glad to meet you, Mr. Lutchester," Jimmy declared, wringing his hand with American cordiality. "Dicky's an old pal of mine—one of the best. We graduated in the same year from Harvard."

Conversation for a few minutes was platitudinous. Van Teyl, although he showed few signs of his recent excesses, was noisy and boisterous, clutching at this brief escape from a situation which he dreaded. Fischer on the other hand, remained in the background, ominously silent, thinking rapidly, speculatin and theorising as to the coincidence, if it were coincidence, of finding Lutchester and Pamela together. He listened to the former's polite conversation, never once letting his eyes wander from his face. All his thoughts were concentrated upon one problem. The mysterious escape of Sandy Graham, which had sent him flying from the country, remained unsolved. Of Pamela's share in it he had already his suspicions. Was it possible that Lutchester was the other and the central figure in that remarkable rescue? He waited his opportunity, and, during a momentary lull in the cheerful conversation, broke in with his first question.

"Say, Mr. Lutchester, you haven't any twin brother, have you?"

"No brother at all," Lutchester admitted.

"Then, how did you get over here? You were at Henry's weren't you, on the night the Laplaid sailed? You didn't cross with us, and there's no other steamer due for two days."

Lutchester Smiled.

"Guess you'll have to explain, if you want to save me from a sleepless night," Fischer persisted.

Lutchester smiled. He had the air of one enjoying the situation immensely.

"Well," he said, "I have had to confess to Miss Van Teyl here, so I may as well tell you, that I am fond of it to you. To every one else I meet in New York, I shall say that I came over on the Lapland. I really came over on a destroyer."

Fischer's face seemed to become more set and grim than ever.

"A British destroyer," he muttered to himself.

"It was kind of a joy ride," Lutchester explained lightly. "A cousin of mine who was in command came to see me and say good-by, just as I'd received my orders from the head of the department to come out here on the next steamer, and he smuggled me on board that night. Mum's the word though, if you please. We asked nobody's leave. It would have taken about a month to have heard anything definite from the Admiralty."

"A British destroyer come across the Atlantic!" Fischer muttered. "She must have come out on a special mission, then, I imagine."

"That must be for me to say," Lutchester observed, with stiff reticence.

Pamela suddenly and purposely intervened. She turned towards Fischer.

"Mr. Lutchester brought some rather curious news," she observed. "He got it by wireless. Do you remember all the fuss there was about the disappearance of Captain Holderness' friend, at Henry's?"

"I heard something about it," he admitted grimly.

Ahead in Science.

"Well, Captain Graham was in my pocket, naturally I was more interested than any one else. To all appearance he entered Henry's Restaurant, walked up stairs, and disappeared into the skies. The place was ransacked everywhere for him, but he never turned up. Well, the very next day he was murdered in a motor car on his way to Northumberland."

"Incredible!" Fischer murmured.

"Seems a queer set out," Lutchester remarked, "but its quite true. He was supposed to have discovered a marvelous new explosive, the formula for which had been stolen. He was on his way up to Northumberland to make fresh experiments."

"For myself I have little faith," Fischer observed, "in any new explosives. In Germany they believe, I understand, that the limit of destructiveness has been attained."

"The Germans should know," Lutchester admitted carelessly. "I'm afraid they are still a good deal ahead of us in most scientific matters. I will take the liberty of calling some time tomorrow, Miss Van Teyl, and hope I shall have the pleasure of improving my acquaintance with your brother. Good night, Mr. Fischer."

FAVORITES OF AUTHORS

IT is no secret, that Mowgli, the wolf-boy of the "Jungle Books," is Mr. Rudyard Kipling's prime favorite or that Rodney Stone, that fine fighter and gallant Englishman, takes precedence of Sherlock Holmes even in the affections of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Thomas Hardy much prefers to consider himself a poet rather than a story writer, but among the many characters he has created he rumored that H. G. Wells has a poorest caan use it fwfahr hrdlu fwao smeaking affection for his Tono Bungay.

It is often difficult to account for prejudices, for likes and dislikes. The public often loves her least worthy lad best. Mark Twain doted on Huckleberry Finn, Dickens had a soft place in his heart for Artful Dodger, and it is said that W. W. Jacobs loves best his sly, diplomatic, cool poacher and general scapegrace, Bob Pretty.

Jerome K. Jerome has never lost his first love for "Three Men in a Boat." It made his name known in two hemispheres, and he feels he owes it a debt of gratitude.

Allan Quatermain is an easy first in the heart of Sir H. Rider Haggard; Marie Corelli's favorite among her own works is "Thelma," and Sir Hall Caine's "The Manxman"; while nobody else can ever take the place of Bubbie, the gypsy lass of "The Little Minister," in the love of Sir James Barrie.

Its Back Up

The sergeant was asking a few raw recruits general knowledge questions.

"Private Pigtails, what is a hill?" he asked suddenly.

"Oh—er——" stammered Pigtails.

"Come on—quick!" rapped out the sergeant.

"Oh," said Pigtails, "I should say it was a field with its back up."

"Old Bill" Pickett Soxton of Northampton Street Church Goes Down Town

rounder. He made a complete tour of Boston Common; he saw both State Houses; he visited Faneuil Hall, the Esplanade and Harvard College.

Now he is telling his friends about his exciting adventures in the far north, and what a terribly hurly-burly the city is, after the pastoral seclusion and quietude of Northampton street.

"Wait till I tell Father Taylor all about it," he said with a wag of the head. He sure will be surprised. He likes to jolly me. Sure I'll spin him a yarn. Little did I ever think I would live to see this day."

AMAZED AT NEW STYLES.

And he relapsed into silence, too confused with crowding impressions to give them voice. Everything—the crowds, the AMERICAN automobile, in the like of which he had never set foot before, the market district with its hucksters, the girls with their short dresses—took his breath away. Bill is nothing if not a gentleman, but he turned his head and leaned out the least bit to look in amazement after a young girl whose hem was—well, at least 14 inches from the sidewalk.

"Look at that," ejaculated Bill. "Oh, the memory of our mothers.

"Sure the girls of today do that to draw attention. The men will be coming to it before long. 'Tis no more foolish to be wearin' short trousers than to be wearin' skirts the like o' that."

But Bill is a gallant soul and thinks that almost anything the ladies dois all right.

"Do I think they'd ought to have the vote? I do. I see no reason why they haven't as much title to vote as us men, and I hope they get it."

In the market district he had a really exciting adventure. He met an old friend.

MEETS FRIEND FAR FROM HOME.

"Hey, Bill!" shouted a voice, and Bill turned in time to wave. He beamed. The world was small, after all. Acquaintances met, by miraculous chance, even in the turmoil of "down town."

"'T is a peddler that comes to Northampton street," he explained. "An' do ye often meet people ye know down town? Cracky!"

It seemed to put new life into him. The feeling of strangeness, almost of homesickness, that had been stealing over him, vanished. He was a long, long way from his own vine and fig-tree, but not desolate. The car in which he rolled over the cobble stones interested him. When told that it cost $5,000 he was surprised, to say the least.

"And once ye could buy a good horse for $50," he exclaimed, adding after a moment, "but not such a horse as this."

He evidently thought, so full of wonders was the world, that there was an airplane just around the corner ready to whirl him up over the gilded dome.

We were on the Esplanade now, and "going strong." Bill had to hold onto his hat. He saw the preparations being made for the AMERICAN'S swimming contest, and was interested in the description of the girl divers. But girls and clothes are of only desultory interest to "Old Bill" now.

NOTHING LIKE KILLARNEY.

"They don't bother me," he said with philosophic calm—following a section of the Back Bay with appreciative eyes as he spoke. Charles River Basin is fine, but not much like the Lakes of Killarney—take it from Bill. He remembers the beautiful lakes of Ireland, but does not care if he never sees his native land again.

He is a thorough-going American, naturalized these many years, and a good Democrat in politics. For the rest, his politics are simple, and consist in thinking that whatever the President does is right.

"He's a fine man," he stated, "and a fine President."

Bill's nature is not what you would call analytic. He has a ready opinion on every subject, but once given, it does not particularly interest him. He is not a waster of words. Although he knows what is going on in the world, his mind lives largely in the past. Asked if he had any relatives in the war, he answered:

"Yes, I had several in the Civil War."

50-YEAR-OLD BLACKTHORN.

He has two nephews who, he thinks, may be in the present war, but has not heard from them for a long time. Bill is unmarried, and his only regular companion is a fine blackthorn stick which he used in walking. It was cut in Ireland and he has carried it for half a century.

Asked why he had never married, he replied, a little sadly:

"Well, I stuck by my mother till she died, and then I was an old man."

Since she left him, Bill has lived alone in a little room on Washington street. Last Winter, during the coal shortage, St. Patrick's was closed and services were held at St. Philip's on Harrison avenue. But Bill never deserted the old place. He goes to it every day, and today did the honors for me, anxious to entertain his entertainers.

He showed the historic interior, where the late Mayor Patrick A. Collins used to worship, and explained that many notables had come "even from Lynn"—which, of course, from the viewpoint of Northampton street, is the jumping off place of the earth.

GUARDS THE OLD CHURCH.

In the little room back of the altar he showed the drawer in which he keeps his vestments—all as neat as a pin, and a matter of great pride o him.

Since the closing of the church, Bill "hangs out" in the doorway of a friendly stable across the street, seeing that no harm comes to the dear old church. He has another regular job, too, at which he works two hours a day—from 6 to 8 p. m. He does watchman's duty at a new building going up next door to the church. So far, Bill has never struck for a shorter working day.

RADIO SAILORS ARE GUARDED FROM HEAT

Commander Ayer Keeps Watchful Eye Over Students at Cambridge School

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Aug. 24.—The thermometer is an object of interest to Commanding Officer Nat F. Ayer during the torrid days.

Friday he kept a careful eye upon it and when it began to climb around the nineties, orders were given that all of the heavy drills that are a part of the daily routine should be discontinued.

One of the features of life at the school is the care and forethought that is exercised to keep all of the men in first-class condition. The education that is being given to the sailors is of a highly technical nature, and the most efficient men are the only ones who can complete the curriculum and graduate.

Swimming is the most popular sport at the school just now. As soon as classes are over in the afternoon several thousand of the white-uniformed boys can be seen wending their way, with towels and abbreviated bathing suits in hand, to the Weld Boathouse, where, under the supervision of Coach Manning, and his corps of aids, they are given instruction in the natatorial art.

Admiral Wood, commandant of the First Naval District, several months ago gave instructions that every new recruit for the naval service should become a swimmer before he was assigned to sea duty if possible.

A remarkable feature of the teaching of so many men how to swim has been the freedom from accidents. There have been one or two hair-breadth escapes from drowning, which have only fallen short of having fatal results because of the watchfulness and efficiency of the instructors, who were chosen after careful tests by Alexander Sutherland, swimming instructor for the First Naval District.

Radio City on the Common is still awaiting the arrival of machinery that will make it possible to turn on the juice for electric lighting.

Electric lights, or no electric lights, however, the order was given, and today two more of the buildings are being occupied by the sailors.

The school's executive officer, Lieutenant Pennoyer, is having a furlough. It is expected that he will be back at his desk next Tuesday.

Uncle Sam Sees to It That Men Have Plenty Coffee

Washington, Aug. 24.—General Pershing's fighting men have just got to have their coffee. The War Department is sparing no effort to see to this.

All the soluble coffee now being manufactured in the United States is purchased by the Quartermaster Corps, and large sums of money are being invested in new companies. The present output is not sufficient for the army's needs; new plants under construction will insure an adequate supply.

Virtually all the soluble coffee now being supplied to the army is used in the front line trenches, where it is not always possible to have hot water. There is times when hot water cannot be brought up from the rear and the heating of water causes a release of smoke which invites the fire of the enemy. Cold water assures the making of good, strong coffee, even though it is cold.

WORCESTER SOLDIER PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Worcester, August 24.—News of the promotion of Lieutenant Edward J. Gully to captain is contained in a telegram received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gully of No. 18 Malvern road from Camp Jackson, S. C., where he has been stationed since his return from France and where he is now an instructor in artillery.

BYROADE VIEWS AYER 'FOREIGN LEGION'

Impressive Sight as Crack Battalion Marches Before Executive Officer of Camp

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 24.—One of the most impressive sights ever witnessed here came in the form of an inspection of Devens' "Foreign Legion" by Colonel George L. Byroade, executive officer of the cantonment.

Of the thousand or more men in line hardly a dozen could speak English. The battalion was made up entirely of men from across the water, all eager to do their bit for Uncle Sam.

Every one stood erect, chest out. The lines swung in perfect unison. They were as straight as a die; in fact not a fault could be found with them as they marched before the scrutinizing eye of Colonel Byroade.

The Colonel moved up and down the lines slowly. He watched every move. Here and there he stopped and questioned a man. As he did another stepped from the ranks to act as interpreter.

The Colonel was much pleased with the showing of the men and expressed satisfaction with a smile which fairly lit up his face.

In the inspecting party besides Col. Byroade were: Major John P. Mies, adjutant of the Depot Brigade; Captain Ernest J. Hall, camp intelligence officer; Captain G. H. Daniels, battalion commander; Lieut. S. A. Gutowski and Lieut. Constantine Walezynski.

All the Armenians in camp were given passes today in order that they might attend special memorial services in Boston tomorrow. They made the trip in special cars.

Thomas L. Shotkin of New Haven, a conscientious objector who declined to accept a farm furlough, will go to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., for the present.

SAVE AMERICAN TEN DAYS IN DUGOUT

Help Reaches Another U. S. Soldier Trapped in Shell Hole

With the Americans on the Aisne-Vesle Front, Aug. 24.—When Captain William Harrigan's company swarmed over the triangular topland south of Vesle, where the enemy had been trying to preserve a bridgehead, they discovered Mike Letnanouski of Langly, Ill., lying in a dugout half filled with water; and then Harold Harman of Mount Carmel, Ill., was found in a shell hole.

Letnanouski had been in the dugout for ten days. He had been hit during the original American advance and dropped into a shell hole. There, unable to move from the spot, he had waited to be rescued, but none of his comrades came until Thursday's successful local sortie accidentally resulted in his being found. During the ten days of horror he had nothing to eat and only rain water to drink.

Herman had only the water from the shell hole to drink, and that water was saturated with gas. Every time he attempted to crawl away German machine gunners and snipers would open fire.

Thursday's American advance, which led to his rescue, came near causing his death, for our barrage burst all around Harman. He escaped injury, however.

Both men were in a fair condition when found, but their stomachs cannot stand food yet.

Harrigan's men cleared out every German machine gun nest within twenty-two minutes, capturing fourteen and killing the rest that had escaped the preliminary American bombardment.

The Germans were well supplied with ammunition. They said they had been told to hold the bridgehead "to the death" as the Germans might need it for a debouching position in a future operation.

SCIENCE CONQUERS EPIDEMIC IN ARMY

Washington, Aug. 24. — Medical science has found a remedy for "empyema"—a disease of the lungs that assumed the proportions of an epidemic in the army camps and cantonments last Winter, and which caused many deaths. The Surgeon-General announced today the remedy strikes at the root of the evil.

MAN BELIEVED DEAD FOR 15 YEARS RETURNS HOME

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 24.—After being mourned as dead for more than fifteen years, Felix Steinmetz surprised friends and relatives here by suddenly returning to this city. He had traveled in various parts of the country for the past thirty-two years and for the last fifteen had failed to communicate with his relatives.

169 KANSAN LAWYERS NOW IN U. S. SERVICE

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 24.—Kansas lawyers to the number of 169 are now in military or naval service, and a large service flag with that number of stars now hangs in the Kansas Supreme Court room. It is believed there are a large number of other "legal lights" in the service whose names have not been secured.

RAILS STRONG IN A RISING MARKET

U. S. Betters Its Friday High—Boston Mart Strong but Sluggish

Railroads were a strong feature, and U. S. Steel bettered its Friday's high by over a point; starting at 112⅜, it rose to 114, up 2; Bethlehem gained ⅝, at 84⅝; Crucible, ½, at 69; and Republic 1, at 93. Baldwin Locomotive, after a small loss, sold up ¾, at 95⅛; American Locomotive was up ½, at 67¼.

Canadian Pacific reached 167½, up 2¾; St. Paul, 50¾, up 1⅝; Reading, 91⅛, up ¾; Union Pacific, 128, up 1⅝. Southern Pacific, 88⅞; New York Central, 74Z; Chesapeake &O hio, 5[illegible]¾, and Baltimore & Ohio, 56⅝, showed fractional gains.

Virginia Carolina Chemical jumped 2 points to 56; Railway Steel Springs, 1⅜, to 67⅞; Central Leather, 1 to 69½, and Hide and Leather, 1, to 21⅞.

Marine preferred, after early weakness, sold up ½, at 102⅜. Fractional gains were made by Mexican Petroleum 100¾, Midvale Steel 53, Distillers 59¼, Sumatra 128¾, and Tobacco Products, 72⅛. United Cigar Stores rose 1¼, to 103½. Motors were inactive at fractionally lower prices.

Near the close: U. S. Steel, 113⅞; Crucible Steel, 69⅝; Bethlehem B, 84¾; Republic, 93⅜; Baldwin, 95¼; Marine pfd., 102½; Canadian Pacific, 167½; Reading, 91⅛; St. Paul, 50¾; New Haven, 44⅝; Union Pacific, 127⅞; United Cigar Stores, 103⅜, and Railway Steel Springs, 67⅛.

The Boston market was strong but inactive. Swift & Company after selling at 117⅛ dropped to 116⅞, off ⅛. Boston & Maine advanced to 36, up 1; United Fruit 129, up 1; Arizona Commercial 16⅛, up ⅜; Mohawk 55¾, up ¾; Fairbanks 48½, up ½; and American Telephone 97, up ¼.

Boston Elevated 69½, and United Shoe 40½ were unchanged. Superior & Boston sold at 3¼.

U. S. Steel closed, 114½; Bethlehem B 85, Crucible, 69½; Republic, 93¾; Canadian Pacific, 170; Union Pacific, 128; St. Paul, 50⅞; Anaconda, 66¾, and Mexican Petroleum, 102.

What Governor McCall's Withdrawal Means

Whoever Wins Senatorial Election Will Have to Do with the Great Problems After the War

Governor McCall's withdrawal from his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator cannot fail to be a great disappointment to all the progressive elements in Massachusetts. This disappointment will not be less felt by forward-looking Republicans than by the many independent voters to whom party labels have come to signify little or nothing.

All the ideals of democracy will be ably and splendidly championed by Ex-Governor David I. Walsh, and with his nomination uncontested the candidacy of Governor McCall had already assured the progressive elements of the State that, should he also be nominated in the primaries, the result of the following contest between the Democratic and Republican candidates for election might be awaited in the comfortable assurance that, whichever won, the problems of the future would be met by the next United States Senator from a more progressive point of view than they have been looked upon by Senator Weeks.

Governor McCall, always independent of party machines, between the time that he left Congress and the hour of his withdrawal, as he says, from public life, developed in the direction of social and democratic progress extraordinarily, to the satisfaction of those who see clearly what threatens the safety of democracy in America.

If Governor McCall had decided to stand in the Republican primaries we have no doubt that he would have received a majority of the votes of his party associates. Many, many times the Republican voters have shown by a large majority that they want their party to be the party of Lincoln, and not to have it remain the instrument of Wall Street and State Street, the tool of the protected interests and their powerful financial organizations that it has become of late years.

The contest must now be one between an ideal democrat like Ex-Governor Walsh and an ideal stand-patter like Senator Weeks. In one sense this is as it should be. It is well that the issues of a political campaign should be clear-cut and beyond mistake.

Whoever is elected will hold office after the war is over, and after the great problems of peace force themselves to the front for solution. The great struggle will then begin of the organized minority, the financial interests, to shift the burden of the war upon the middle class and the working class. Already a nation-wide alliance of manufacturers is organized to destroy the power of union labor to protect the working classes in the struggle which is to come after the war.

The poor middle class man has no organization to protect him, and he is very likely to be the worst sufferer in the coming contest as he already has been the worst sufferer in the past. His desire to be "in good form" has always led him to detach himself from the workingman, and to aim to be considered a member of the so-called upper class, so that he often becomes the unwitting supporter of the corporation autocracy which exploits him and the workingman alike. He has to bear the heaviest burdens of the increased cost of living, and he often has to bear also the burden of the loss of his little savings invested in stock-watered industries or in the privately-managed public utilities which piratical combines have been able to loot at will through the control of the government by the invisible forces which have so often made our pretence of democracy a very hollow mockery.

A position in the United States Senate is one of the most powerful positions in the world, and even one Senator will have a great influence upon the questions which will arise after the war, the answers to which will determine whether or not the war is to be the means of progress and betterment to the American people or the cause of a great reaction which will leave us only a crushing debt and tears for those who have fallen.

We all know of Senator Weeks. We know all his connections. We know his plans for the future. We know his ideals of democracy. We know how he will vote on the great measures which will arise when this great struggle comes. We know that he not only favors a plutocratic government, but is a member of its inner circles himself.

We do not criticise him for this, and a very large number of us would no doubt be where he is if we could get there. Human nature is very selfish. But it is our right, and very vitally our interest, to insist that in the critical period of adjustment to the conditions that will confront the nation after the war one at least of the representatives of Massachusetts in the national Senate shall represent the interests of the great body of Massachusetts citizenship and not the narrow and selfish viewpoint of State Street and High Finance.

Hard Going

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Your Morale Is Essential to Good Life, She Says, and Instances a Case of a Pretty, but "Sloppy," Girl Who Was to Be the Memory of a Soldier Boy Going to France

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

SHE was such a pretty creature, with lovely hair and eyes and a charming smile — evidently one of those ingenuous, natural girls that you like at once—and the soldier with whom she was dining was a good-looking, well set-up lad. And they seemed to be having such a beautiful time together.

It was plain that she was the memory he was going to carry with him to France. His mind would turn again and again to, "You and the fountain's splash, And the song of the trees, The tilt of your hat and the flash Of your lips and the breeze, Scent of the smoke and sachet— Were your eyes hazel or blue?— Under the lanterns a-sway, Summer and You!"

Romantic Scene

It was as pretty and romantic a scene as anyone would want to look at, and the most stony-hearted cynic could scarcely have observed those two, so delighted with each other, so happy to be together, and not have involuntarily and sympathetically smiled and then sighed.

But—there is always a "but"—although I liked and admired that attractive girl, I wanted to go over and preach a little sermon to her, in spite of my horror of preaching. Really, though, she deserved it.

There was her soldier, immaculate, neat as a pin, shining from the top of his head to the toe of his boot. And she—well, she was a bit sloppy. Her hair was lovely in tint, but it had not been brushed until it shone; her white georgette frock was pretty, but it was anything but fresh; her white shoes were soiled; and the gloves she threw on the table beside her would not have been countenanced in Spotlesstown.

What He Saw

She wasn't keeping up her morale half as well as he was keeping up his. He looked at her thought everything about her was charming, but he wouldn't always remain blind to her carelessness, and sooner or later it would irritate and annoy him. He would notice that her petticoat dangled half an inch below her skirt and that her heels were run over and that she never used quite enough hairpins to keep her hair up.

These trifles would get on his nerves, and he would exaggerate them. Her besetting sin—that lack of daintiness—might very easily become the little rift within the lute that by and by would make their music mute.

My eye was caught by a paragraph in a newspaper the other day. It stated that the government insisted that the soldiers should be clean shaven for two reasons. The first was that a clean shave assisted the gas mask to fit more accurately; the second, that it preserved the soldier's morale.

I hastened to ask a man if a clean shave made any difference to his feelings and his outlook on life.

"I should say so," he replied. "When I obviously need one I feel like a hobo and I slink around like a criminal. After I've had it I am again a decent member of society and can look the whole world in the eye. No one has ever been able to explain the peculiar psychological effect of a clean shave, but every man knows that it exists. It is a tonic to the spirit and a moral support!"

A few moments after this conversation I met a woman I know. "You're looking very blithe and happy and good and gay," I said. "The world is evidently treating you very nicely."

She laughed. "I didn't think so this morning. I got up with the blackest kind of blues. I couldn't see a gleam of sunshine anywhere. So I took my invariable cure."

"What is that?" I asked with interest. If there is such a thing as a cure for the blues it would be eagerly welcomed. I wanted to be the first to give it to a waiting world.

"The prescription is a simple one," she said. "It began with a shampoo. Then I had my nails manicured, then my hair dressed in the most becoming fashion. I put on all my most attractive things from the skin out, and then my best looking frock. By that time I was humming a tune and quite able to feel that the world is so full of a number of things, I think that we all should be happy as kings.'"

In the old days when they wanted to accentuate their gloom they resorted to sackcloth and ashes. Isn't it natural that purple and fine linen would have the opposite psychological effect?

The Women Who Are at Home

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1918, Star Company.

They are as brave as any man who goes
Forward to face our foes
On battle fronts, these women of each land
Who proudly take their stand
And, with no protest, face and do not shirk
The unaccustomed work
Which helps the Ship of State to ride the wave
With banners flying. Brave
As any soldier at the front, I say,
These women are who do men's work today.

The warriors of the world could not be fed
Or clothed or comforted—
The nations could not carry on their toil
Did they not till the soil
And keep the wheels of action moving on;
These women from whose homes the men have gone—
Husbands and fathers, brothers, sons—to fight
In this great cause of justice and of right
Against inhuman might.

The anguish that they feel
May not be uttered. With a smiling face
Each fills her lonely place
And sends a cheering message over seas.
Oh, it is such as these
Who give the radiance of an auriflamme
To sanctify the name
Of womanhood. Unto this noble throng
Honor and praise and gratitude belong.
Low at their feet I lay my leaf of song.

Needles of Gold

The war has upset many old standards and set up new ones. One of the curious results of this upheaval is that gold has been reduced, in some cases, to the role of a cheap substitute for other metals, says the Popular Science Monthly for July. Hypodermic needles, for instance, were formerly made of platinum or platinum-iridium, two metals now practically unobtainable.

The increased war demand for these needles led to many experiments with other metals and alloys in the hope of finding a good substitute. A manufacturing concern, making a specialty of tempering precious metals, has recently perfected a hypodermic needle of specially tempered 14-carat gold, which offers many advantages.

This Day Will Be Remembered Always

The "Twenty-Ones" Are Marching to the Registration Offices—Congress Will Pass the Man-Power Bill, Calling to the Colors Youths of Eighteen, Nineteen and Twenty and "Oldsters" Up to Forty-five—The Correspondents Are Right, Disaster Faces the Germans!

The end of the week finds so many stories still hanging in the air, as the saying is, that the wise man will recognize at once the advisability of saying that thoughtful word in advance to his regular newsdealer:

"I MUST have a copy of tomorrow's Sunday ADVERTISER AND AMERICAN."

All over the country today the Twenty-Ones are marching to the registration booths. If you became twenty-one years old since June 5 of the present year, you are to remember that today is the big day.

We shall learn from the Sunday newspapers what General Crowder has to say to millions of other Americans—youths from 18 to 21 and "oldsters" from 31 to 45—who will be asked today to register early in September. The Man Power bill is expected to pass both House and Senate before the week-end adjournment. EVERYTHING about THIS measure will be news of importance in nearly every home in America.

And then there is the continued and continuing story of the great success of Haig—and Mangin—from Arras to Lihons and from the River Matz to territory north of Soissons. On a fifty-mile front, the dispatches tell us, the Germans "face disaster." May tomorrow's journals give us details of the disaster!

The request of skilled workmen in the shipyards for a rate of one dollar an hour, and the controversy at Washington over the Work or Fight amendment to the Man-Power bill, bring Labor to the front again in discussions of the War. Every worker everywhere will want to be posted on the Work or Fight proposition.

And so, brethren, warned as you have been that in this day of conservation of men and materials the newsdealer must pay for every copy of every newspaper that comes to him—"no returns!" in the phraseology of circulation gentlemen—it behooves the man or woman who would sit down on Sunday to "catch up with the war" to place an order early. For all practical purposes the Sunday newspaper is sold before it is printed.

The editor of the War Songs supplement to the Sunday ADVERTISER AND AMERICAN wanders from the war song theme to offer to his friends a novelty in the form of the words and music—complete—of "Oh Lady! Lady!!" one of the song-hits in the musical comedy of that name now happily and most successfully on view at the Wilbur Theatre.

P. G. Wodehouse, whose delightful stories you have enjoyed, wrote "Oh Lady! Lady!!" and Jerome Kern set it to music. This song, exactly as you receive it tomorrow with your copy of New England's greatest Sunday newspaper, is on sale about town at sixty cents the copy. And these are war times.

There are, of course, the usual choruses: Fred Swan's "No Friends Like the Friends From Way Back Home"; Vincent Plunkett's "I'm Knitting a Rosary"; Arthur Guy Empey's "Your Lips Are No Man's Land But Mine."

We print MORE of those wonderful letters that arrive from time to time from the young women of the Smith College unit in France. This time the writers are Dr. Clara Greenough and Hannah Andrews.

William Atherton Du Puy, continuing his reviews of what the various sub-divisions of the War and Navy Departments have accomplished, writes interestingly of the quartermasters. The problem before the Quartermaster's Department was to provide for an army which had increased twenty-fold in twelve months. Du Puy tells how it was done. There is a foreword by Brig. Gen. R. E. Wood.

From another timely Washington letter—based upon official reports from France—we learn that "all the odds are in favor of the wounded American soldier." The report is that 80 per cent. of our wounded are so well taken care of that in two months they are ready to return to active duty. A message of reassurance to mothers and fathers, wives, sweethearts, sisters, everybody.

Of all the stories in the Sunday paper, WE like the account of a Lawrence schoolmaster who has been spending his vacation at Old Orchard Beach, proprietor of one of the most popular restaurants for miles around. A story—with pictures—to cheer the folks of Lawrence, delight Old Orchard and INFORM people everywhere.

Our schoolmaster recites some of the benefits he has received from his vacation. He says:

My work this Summer has made me feel more fit than ever to assist the children of these parents who have to struggle hard to educate and support their families. . . . One of the gigantic problems before the people is the food question. Some wholesalers have seized life's necessities and charged whatever prices they saw fit. My personal experiences with some of them have been most illuminating.

But he is not pessimistic. He goes back to Lawrence better equipped and prepared for his great and noble work. Read his message.

Then there is the news of politics, from EVERY front. We SHOULD have in hand, before midnight, another blast from Congressman Peter Tague, who, representing the East Boston-Charlestown-West End-North End district, appears to be on the edge of a battle for his life with the distinguished gentleman whom Mr. Tague calls the "Dorchester alien." We observe that the various minor candidates who had been threatening or promising to pester the Congressman have retired from the field. It is to be Tague vs. Fitz, to somebody's finish.

Up in New Hampshire, George H. Moses has retired from the Republican scramble for the long term in the United States Senate to become a candidate for the short (or Gallinger) term. Maine is almost ready for its September "barometer" election. If politics ever adjourned, it appears to have re-convened! (There MAY be something from T. W. L., too.)

When Death comes, will YOU be able to say, "I have done the best I could"? "What WILL You Say to Death?" is the subject of the full-page Sunday editorial.

Perhaps the most notable feature of the Magazine Section is the opening instalment of Gil Patten's tale of love, mystery and the great war, "The Enchanted Hour." With an illustration, in colors, by the celebrated Howard Chandler Christy.

Many of you have doubtless had the thought, during this recent hot spell, that a way might be found to store the excessive heat of August for use in the cold of January. Prof. Garrett P. Serviss discusses the subject seriously and helpfully, in "Science's Plan to Store Summer's Heat for Winter's Use."

Newport will read every word of "How the War May Make Mabel Gerry's Love Dream Come True." . . . There is an exquisite short story by Mabel Roberts Rhinehart, "When Dad Came Home."

Messrs. McManus, Goldberg, Opper and Knerr perform in the Comic Section.

To be without New England's greatest Sunday newspaper on Sunday is to be lonesome and peculiar.
